This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world’s books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that’s often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book’s long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files  We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying  Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google’s system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution  The Google “watermark” you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal  Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can’t offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book’s appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google’s mission is to organize the world’s information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world’s books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/
ARABIC PROVERBS;

OR

THE MANNERS AND CUSTOMS

OF THE

MODERN EGYPTIANS,

ILLUSTRATED

FROM THEIR PROVERBIAL SAYINGS CURRENT AT CAIRO;

TRANSLATED AND EXPLAINED

BY THE LATE

JOHN LEWIS BURCKHARDT.

SECOND EDITION.

LONDON:
BERNARD QUARITCH, 15, PICCADILLY.
MDCCCLXXV
C
TRANSLATOR'S PREFACE.

Many of the proverbial sayings translated in this volume, were collected by Sheref ed dîn Ibn Asad, a native of Cairo, who lived, it is said, early in the last century, but never acquired a very high literary reputation. The translator found those Proverbs written upon nine or ten leaves in the common-place book of a sheikh, with whom he was acquainted in this city; but they wanted explanation or commentary. Of those he has omitted a considerable number, many being altogether uninteresting, and others so grossly indecile that he could not venture to lay them before the public, although it must be acknowledged that they excelled in wit. Several sayings which appear to have been popular in the time of Ibn Asad, are no longer current; and these the translator has marked with an asterisk.

The original collection he has augmented by some hundreds, committed to paper as he heard them quoted in general society or in the bázár. Where the sense of a Proverb did not seem quite clear, he has explained it, or at least noticed the meaning commonly assigned to it, as well as any peculiarity of language wherever the provincial idiom differs from the learned Arabic. In this labour he was assisted by many intelligent Arabs of Cairo. The natives, in general, are so fond of figurative language and of witty allusions and comparisons taken from low life, that these sayings are constantly quoted on every common occasion, and express the tendency or moral of an event much better than could be done by a long or flowery speech. Many of these sayings are rhythmical, and sometimes the rhymes are extremely happy; but the drollery is lost in a plain translation, which has been rendered as literal as possible, and in which the true sense has never been sacrificed to elegance. They are written in the vulgar dialect of Cairo, such as every inhabitant understands and every one uses, except perhaps a few who affect to despise the language of the lower classes. These Proverbs offer a genuine specimen of the Arabic at present spoken in the Egyptian capital, and the same, or very nearly the same, as that used in the towns of the Delta.

These sayings are useful, as they serve to show us how the Arabs judge of men and things, and in this respect it must be acknowledged that many are dictated by wisdom and sagacity. Several Scriptural sayings and maxims of ancient sages will be found here naturalized among Arabs; as well as some Proverbs which have generally been supposed of European origin.

Meidani has collected many sayings that were current among the ancient Arabs at the most brilliant period of their social state and of their language; but the present collection offers to our view a different nation and different manners; it also exhibits in some places an adulterated dialect, and alludes to vices which were probably but little known among the forefathers of the Egyptians. It proves, however, that the language is not by any means so corrupted as various travellers have imagined, and that the principles of virtue and honour, of friendship and true charity, of independence and generosity, are perfectly well known to the modern inhabitants of Egypt, although very few among them take the trouble of regulating their conduct accordingly.

The number of nine hundred and ninety-nine Proverbs might easily have been augmented by one, but the translator refrains from completing the thousand, adopting here a notion prevalent among Arabs, that even numbers are unlucky, and that any thing perfect in its quantity is particularly affected by the evil eye. He does not pretend to possess such a thorough knowledge of the learned Arabic as would have enabled him to indicate every instance of discrepancy between the language of these popular sayings and that used by the ancient Arabian writers. His long residence at Cairo rendered the vulgar idiom of its inhabitants familiar to him; and knowing how few specimens of that idiom have hitherto been published, he flatters himself with the hope that this collection may interest and gratify the Orientalist, and that his explanations will be regarded as the hasty work of a traveller subject to numerous inconveniences, and who may, in some cases, have been deceived by erroneous or defective information, and not criticised as the elaborate treatise of a learned Arabic scholar or grammarian, surrounded by all the means of making his composition perfect.

CAIRO, 25th of March, 1817.

---

NOTE OF THE EDITOR.

---

To Burckhardt's short Preface a few lines must here be added. That accomplished traveller has sufficiently explained his motives for withholding from publication several Proverbs which had found a place in his original collection. It seems necessary that the Editor should account why this volume does not contain even so many as Burckhardt evidently intended to publish (nine hundred and ninety-nine). The numerical series is interrupted in various parts of the manuscript, not by any accidental injury, mutilation, or loss of leaves, but by chasms, which amount in some instances to whole decades of Proverbs; the most considerable deficiency occurring where (in the middle of a page) immediately after No. 516 follows No. 577. These omissions may not unreasonably be supposed to have arisen from the writer's mistake of one figure for another; in fact the 1 of No. 516 so much resembles a 7, (being nearly joined to the 5 by a stroke of the pen at its upper part,) that it might easily deceive the eye. Some allowance must also be made for the effect of those inconvenient circumstances to which our ingenious traveller has above alluded. Under whatever circumstances of difficulty, danger, or inconvenience, he may have collected and explained these Proverbs, his work offers a variety of curious and original information respecting the manners, customs, and opinions of an extraordinary people; while his philological remarks must prove highly useful and interesting to all who are desirous of understanding, with critical accuracy, the modern Arabic dialect used at Cairo.

In the composition of this work, as of his volumes already published, he adopted the language of our country, and generally with sufficient correctness; it has been, however, in some places, necessary to substitute an English for a foreign idiom, Burckhardt's meaning being on all occasions most scrupulously preserved; even where his translation of certain terms or phrases (which the Arabic scholar will soon discover) appeared more literal than decent, it has been endeavoured by circumlocution to express the sense without offending delicacy. These and the omission of a few Proverbs (found to agree most exactly both in words and signification with others given under preceding numbers) constitute the only liberties which have been assumed by the Editor.

WILLIAM OUSELEY.

London, May 21st, 1830.
Erratum—Proverb No. 138. For صائت read صائحت
ARABIC PROVERBS

OF THE

MODERN EGYPTIANS.

حرف اللف

No. 1.

ألف دقق لا سلام عليك

A thousand raps at the door, but no salute or invitation from within.

This is said of a person's fruitless endeavours to become intimate with another.

2.

ألفًا تنا ولا تنا

(Let them strike or slap) a thousand necks, but not mine.

Among the Arabs it is usual to strike the neck (تَفَا) and not the ears. A blow on the neck is considered a much greater affront than a slap on the face. Not only the neck, but a blow struck upon the neck, is expressed in the Egyptian dialect by تفت (تفت) (خربته تفت). Thus "I struck him a blow on his neck," is exactly equivalent in its meaning to the English phrase, "I boxed his ears."

3.
الف كركي في اجوج ما تعوز عصفر في الكف
A thousand cranes in the air are not worth one sparrow in the fist.

The crane كركي is a bird common in the Delta, particularly about the Lake of Menzaleh. كف properly signifies the "hand," or "palm of the hand;" but in Egypt is generally used for the "fist."

4.
إذا كان القمر معك لا تبالى بالنجوم
If the moon be with thee, thou needest not to care about the stars.

5.
إذا كان معك نحس لا تسبح ينجيك انتخس منه
If a worthless fellow be with thee, do not let him go, or else one worse will come to thee.

The general meaning is, that we should bear present ills rather than, by endeavouring to remove them, expose ourselves to greater. This saying is often quoted with respect to servants, whose dishonesty and insolence are subjects of universal complaint throughout Egypt. The word يسب in common acceptation signifies "to leave a thing, to let it go out of one's hands." The word نحس is used in Egypt to express a low, disorderly, unprincipled character—a base, worthless fellow.

6.

إذا كانت العمايق تشتكي الفسأ إيش يكون حال الألبسة

If the turbans complain of a slight wind, what must be the state of the inner drawers?

This proverb is quoted when the citizens of Cairo murmur at oppression, the peasants having much greater reason for being discontented. الفسأ—يشي—اللبسة in the Egyptian dialect used for شي، plural of لباس, drawers worn under the great trowsers.

7.

إذا كان زوجي راضي إيش فصول الثاني

If my husband consent, why should the kadhy's interference be necessary.

This means in general that when two parties who have contended agree to be reconciled, the arbitration of a third person is not requisite. But the saying more particularly alludes to divorces, which in many cases are determined by the kadhy. فصول in the Egyptian dialect, signifies—the meddling, officious interference of a third person.
8.

If thou forgettest to say "Praise be to God," in what other words wilt thou pray?

This is addressed to persons who neglect the principal object or part of their business, and execute only that which is the least important. الحمد means the expression لله, which commences the Fateha, or first chapter of the Koran, and should be recited in every prayer. بايش in the Egyptian dialect for باي. The Egyptians always put this after the verb in interrogations, as بايش بايش—whilst the Syrians invariably place it before, and say بايش بايش.

9.

If thy neighbour distike thee, change the gate of thy house.

The intimacy with neighbours is much greater in the East than in Europe; and the repose of a family often depends upon the harmony subsisting between it and those who occupy the adjoining house.

10.

If thy neighbour shaves (somebody), do thou soak (the head of the person whom he shaves).

Always endeavour to act agreeably to the wishes of thy neighbour. يبل to wet, meaning here to wet the head with a lather of soap before the application of a razor.

11.

إذا أراد رينا هلعك نملة انبت لها اجنبة
If God proposes the destruction of an ant, he allows wings to grow upon her.

The sudden elevation of persons to stations above their means or capacities, may often cause their ruin.

12.

إذا رأيت اعور عبر اقلب حجر
If thou seest a one-eyed person pass by, turn up a stone.

The people of Cairo turn up a stone or break a water-jar behind the back of any person whom they dislike, just on his leaving them, hoping thereby to prevent his return; this is a kind of incantation. The term one-eyed here expresses a person disagreeable on any account. The Arabs regard a one-eyed man as of bad omen (شوم), and nobody wishes to meet him.

13.

إذا رأيت حيط مابيل هرول من تحتها
If thou seest a wall inclining, run from under it.

Fly from him whose power is tottering, or whom dangers threaten. In the Egyptian dialect حيط is used for حايط.
14.

 إذا كثرت الألوان أعرف أنها من بيوت الجيران
If the dishes increase in number, it becomes known that they are from the houses of neighbours.

In the East, neighbours frequently supply the wants of their friend’s kitchen on occasion of family feasts. This saying implies that when a person makes too expensive an entertainment, it is evident that he has borrowed from others. لون (in the plural الألوان) means not only “a colour,” but, among the Egyptians, a dish of dressed victuals.

15.

 إذا كثرت النواتية غرفت الركب
If the sailors become too numerous, the ship sinks.

كثرت ثُبت instead of كثرت. The is seldom pronounced in Egypt.

16.

 إذا حبتك حبيبة أطلق بها
If a serpent love thee, wear him as a necklace.

If dangerous people show affection towards thee, court their friendship by the most polite attention.

17.

 إذا انكسر التحمل حمل حمار
If thy camel break down, put on an ass-load.

Suit thy business to thy circumstances.
ARABIC PROVERBS.

18.

إذا كان الكفن مخلقًا و الفاسل أعر و الدكة مكسورة و الأرض سبّاحة

If the winding-sheet be ragged, and the corpse-washer one-eyed, and the bier broken, and the burial-ground a saltish soil, then truly the deceased must belong to the inhabitants of hell.

If everything in a person's business goes wrong, he must be totally ruined at last. دكة is properly a stand or frame on which the coffin rests before it is removed to the grave.

19.

إذا بَلِيت بالشحاتة دق الأبواب الكبار

If mendicity should unfortunately be thy lot, knock at the large gates only.

Ask assistance from those only who have the power of helping thee.

20.

إذا كان البجل يبَلّ له فالسَكر ايش نقول له

If an onion causes his loud rejoicings, what then shall we say to sugar?

Said of people who bestow admiration upon trifling objects.

21.

إذا سوّوك حصاد شرشر منجلك

If they call thee reaper, whet thy scythe.

Endeavour, even by mere appearances, to convince people that thou deservest the reputation that thou enjoyest.

22.

إذا حضر الماء بطل التيم

If water is present for ablution, the use of sand is discontinued.

Affluence renders unnecessary what is practised during poverty. التيم is the ablution with sand which the Turkish law prescribes when water cannot be procured.

23.

إذا حضرت الملكة غابت الشياطين

When the angels present themselves, the devils abscond.

24.

إذا هب الهوئ دخل شقوق

If the wind blows, it enters at every crevice.

A lucky person is fortunate in the most trifling affair. شقوق plural of شق، a fissure in the wall.

25.

إذا كان في إيدك دهن امسكه فن أقرب الناس عليك

If there be grease on thy hand, rub it off at thy nearest friend’s.

Let your own kindred, and not strangers, share in your superfluities, or the fragments from your table. ايد is used at Cairo for يد—and pronounced there ed, not yed, as it ought to be.

26.

If thou seest him reproaching and swearing at him, know that he loves him.

De amatoribus dicitur. بسب is commonly used at Cairo for reviling, calling opprobrious names, or swearing at a person.

27.*

If the water come like a deluge, place thy son under thy feet.

Save thyself, even at the expense of thy nearest kindred or friends—a selfish principle very general in the Levant. According to Moslim tradition, when the deluge came and the rebel sons of Noah felt the water approach their ankles, they took their little children in their arms; when the water rose higher, they placed them upon their shoulders, then upon their heads; but at last, when the flood reached to their own mouths, they put the children under their feet, endeavouring to keep their own heads above the water.

28.*

The thief who understands his business does not steal from his own quarter (of the town).

الглас العيار ما يسرق من حارته شي علم, able, clever, expert.
29.

اخر الليل نسمع العباق

At the close of the night the cries are heard.

This saying is addressed to persons exulting in good fortune, to warn them of the final issue. The night may have passed tranquilly, but at the end affrays often happen, occasioned either by drunkards, profligates coming from the houses of public women, or by robbers, who generally commit depredations at that time, when they suppose the inhabitants to be asleep.

30.

اخر الطب الكي

The ultimate remedy is a cautery.

If nothing else will avail, violent measures must be at last adopted.

31.

العرس عرس ابوت و الناس يضاربونا

The nuptials are the nuptials of our father, yet the people fight with us.

Those who have the strongest claim find themselves dispossessed of the advantage by others. This saying alludes to a crowd of fellows who have assembled at a nuptial entertainment, but beat and displace the bridegroom's children, to make room for themselves.
32.

The pregnant woman longed for it, but the nurse ate it.

This proverb resembles in sense that immediately preceding. The whims of pregnant women are treated with indulgence in the East as well as in Europe.

33.

The miller takes (steals) handful by handful, but the Lord takes (sums up his reckoning) mule (load) by mule (load).

in Egypt used for —the being generally pronounced as د.

34.

Rather be scarified with an axe than require favours from others.

It might likewise mean a thing, or (as hereafter remarked), and so understood would signify, "better to be scarified with an axe than to owe or be indebted to others for anything." The phrase means cupping, also to make mere scarifications on the forehead or legs—a common practice in the Levant. Among the Bedouins, a father threatening his son, says, "if you do so we shall cup (or scarify) you."
35.

The captain (of the ship) loves thee, wipe thy hand on the sail.

He who is favoured by government may do anything with impunity.

36.

I like my mother-in-law, and I like also that she should make a (disgusting) smell under my nose (crepitum reddendo).

This refers to a silly, obstinate fellow, who persists in longing for what offends others. In the East it is generally supposed that a mother-in-law cannot long be on good terms with the son-in-law, and her name is commonly used as a term expressing "disagreeable kindred." Here is to be understood that she is under

37.*

Play with a slave, he will show to thee his hinder parts.

Low people become insolent if you admit them to familiarity. She is equivalent to طبيز—or rather to خرب الطليز 38.

A splinter entered the sound eye of a one-eyed person.

"I wish you good night," said he.

He fancied that night had arrived. This refers to those who judge the world merely by their own sensations, and suppose that every one must feel as they do.

ةَشْتة in the Egyptian dialect, signifies any small piece of wood, straw, &c.

39.*

He is hump-backed, yet whirls about.

properly expresses those "tours de force" practised by a rope dancer in wheeling round his whole body with the head forwards.

40.

He is blind, and still ogles the women.

or is commonly used at Cairo to describe the glances which a man passing in the street directs towards the shutters, behind which the women sit.
41.*
الكلام لك يا جارة إلا انت جارة
It is to thee I speak, my (fair) neighbour; but truly thou art an ass.

This is said of dull persons, unable to comprehend a slight hint. A man conversing with his own wife, was desirous of giving a hint to his neighbour's wife, of whom he was the gallant, and who overheard the conversation; but she did not understand him, and he in a rage used the words above quoted.

42.
أن جات الدادة احن من الولادة دي حنية فاسدة
If the midwife happen to have more commiseration (for the child) than the mother, that is a corrupt feeling.

The humane intentions of inferior officers are of little avail, if the spirit of government be unmerciful. The midwife. هيدي ديو used in Egypt for حنیة حنیة may likewise be translated "affection."

43.*
ايش ما طبتخت العمشة اروحها بيعشًا
Whatever the half-blind wife cooks for her husband, he sups on it.

Custom reconciles us to bad living. *عـيش half-blind, sore-eyed. (The Egyptians frequently use the imprecation, "blindness to thy eyes," )

The of بيعشا is according to the Egyptian dialect, and often prefixed to verbs; but still more commonly in Syria than in Egypt.

44.

What is in the cauldron is taken out with the kitchen spoon.

Every affair requires its own peculiar treatment, and its own people to bring it to a conclusion: also, to obtain information, the proper mode must be adopted. يلمع الذي used in Egypt for.has many significations; it here means "to take out." المغرفة is the great kitchen ladle or wooden spoon.

45.

The lazy person has no legs.

The Egyptians pronounce الله as if it were written لoo, instead of saying lahoo.

46.

The burial is attended by crowds of people, the deceased is—a dog.

Alluding to great honours bestowed on persons not worthy of them. حامية signifies a burial or funeral when it is "hot," i.e., attended by multitudes.
47.

العب بالمقصوص حتي يتحكي الديوانی

Play with false coin until thou gettest a diwány.

مقصوص is the old clipped silver or copper coin, likewise false coin. The Egyptians more generally use زغول or زئف to express false money. Diwány is the same as párd. To gain, begin humbly.

48.

الفرخ الناجب من البيضة يبان

The fine pullet shows its excellence from the egg.

The pullets most likely to thrive are those which cry from the very egg. This is likewise expressed by the saying

الكنكوت الناسح من البيضة يصبح

The words فرخ and كنكوت are synonymous.

49.*

الدنيا مراية اوريها توريك

The world is a mirror; show thyself in it, and it will reflect thy image.

We may also translate thus: "show thyself in it (i.e., be frank with the people), and it will let thee see its image" (i.e., people will be frank with thee). This meaning would be more clearly expressed by the words اوريها نفسك توريك نفسها. In the Egyptian dialect مراية is used for مراة.
50.

لا ليلة مثيرة من عصر بنيت

From the aszer (or afternoon) it appears whether the night will be clear.

This (like No. 48) means that a person gives indications of his future virtues from early youth. بنيت is much used among the Egyptians for بنيت.

51.

اعمّ بأسفوت ولا تنسى الشروط

Tie a turban of straw round thy head, but do not forget thy engagements.

Play the fool as much as thou wilt, but observe thy promises and engagements. اسفوت ربّت and shront are made. Idiots fasten them like turbans about their heads. يتعم signifies "to tie a turban."

52.

المستعمل والبطي عند المعدية يلتقي

The hasty and the tardy meet at the ferry.

Extremes often meet معدية a ferry-boat. The ferries wait a long time on the banks of the Nile, until the complement of passengers be full.

53.

اسم طوبة و الفاعل لمشير

Tooba bears the name, but the deeds belong to Emskyr.

This alludes to the common saying: برد طوبة "the cold of the Tooba," which in Egypt is applied to any considerable degree of cold. Tooba is the Coptic month comprehending the greater part of January: but the coldest month in Egypt, although it has not the character of being so, is Emshyr, the month next after Tooba.

54.

ابشِّينا علي دي الطَّلَق يبجي غلام

From the mother's efforts in labour, we expected the birth of a male child.

"Parturiunt montes, nascitur ridiculus mus." Sons are much more desired than daughters throughout the East. طلاق "the labour of a woman in childbed."

55.*

اعمل حبة و حاسب البطال

Work (were it only) for a single grain, and reckon up the profits of him who does nothing.

حبة "often means "a trifle." Thus it is said, حبة "not even the smallest trifle."

56.

إ لنفيها قطع ابزارها قال الدورة علي لم الشمل

If thou find her, cut her veil in two. "The object is now to find the chance of meeting her," he replied.

It is not sufficient to form projects, circumstances must favour us in executing them. ابزار a woman's veil, generally of black silk or cotton. تال is here put for. In the Egyptian dialect الدورة means "now, for once, above all." دوري "in my turn." لـم الشمل literally, "the gathering together what is separated;" or as here, "to cause or find a meeting." The expression الدورة علي لـم الشمل often signifies nothing more than "if, if!"

57.

انا اخير بشم بلدي

I best know the sun of my own country.

Every one knows best his own affairs, and those interested in them.

58.

الزابية محرمة علي الكلب

The Zalabye is (a dish) forbidden to the dogs.

The higher classes only can enjoy certain pleasures. زابية are round cakes made of flour, butter, and sugar; not much in fashion of late at Cairo.

59.*

المحتاج اخو القننان

The needy is the brother of the cuckold.

The needy husband connives at the dishonourable earnings of his unfaithful wife. The term قننان (cuckold) is no longer used at Cairo. Cuckolds and procurers are generally comprised under the same appellation م现代社会, which is the common expression of insult among the Egyptians, and heard on every occasion. Equivalent to م现代社会 are the words نداد and دماغ.
60.

التخنسة في عين أمها مليحة

_The beetle is a beauty in the eyes of its mother._

On the infatuation of parents. The beetle (خنفسة) is cited by the present Egyptians as remarkable for its ugliness. They use ملح in the sense of "handsome."

61.

العمل بازيت ولا الفعاد في البيت

_Work, though thy gain be merely the oil, rather than sit (idle) at home._

This alludes to the oil with which lamps are lighted, and which costs each family at least two paras every night. To express that a man is reduced to abject poverty, the Egyptians say, "he has not as much as would pay for the oil." ما عندى حق ازيت

62.

الفائدة في التخرا ولا الفرامة في المسک

_Gain upon dirt rather than loss upon musk._

Endeavour to gain in low pursuits rather than lose in brilliant concerns. غرامة is used in Egypt to signify "loss;" but the term خسارة is more frequently employed.
63.

 إن سلمت الدير من سعيد ماجي احد من بعيد

If the house be relieved from (the presence of) Sayd, no other will come from afar.

This relates in general to importunate and intruding visitors. Sayd was one of those parasites (مأخفج) who in former times were established as a regular corporation at Cairo, and became a plague to all who gave entertainments. They have their chief or sheikh, and obtruded their company at every private feast, unless they were induced by a present to depart from the house.

64.

 العائل من فئة والمعجبون من لقة

The wise with a wink, the fool with a kick (are taught to understand).

65.

 اتبع اليوم بوديكي تلكر

Follow the owl, she will lead thee to a ruined place.

On the consequences of bad company. يزدي in constant use among the Egyptians, signifying "to carry," "to lead," "to transport."

66.

 الدبان يعرن وجه اللبان

The fly knows the face of the milk-seller.

This proverb chiefly refers to the dancing girls, who, when they are brought for the amusement of company, pay attention particularly to those whom they soon discover to be the most inclined towards them.

67.
ابليس ما يخرب بيته
_The devil does not destroy his (own) house._

68.
ابليس يعرف ره لکن يتخابث
_The devil knows his Lord, but still practises evil._

On a person who understands the precepts of religion, but never acts according to them. In the Egyptian dialect, يتخابث “to practise foul deeds,” “to intrigue,” or “embroil.”

69.
السلطان يشتم في غيبه
_The Sultan is reviled in his absence (only)._}

70.
البيت لنا والحديث لنا
_To us belong the house, and the talking (therein)._}

This expresses that we are here sole masters, or that it is our own affair exclusively.
ARABIC PROVERBS

71.

The public woman who is liberal (of her favours), does not wish for a procuress.

A thorough scoundrel wants no inducement to bad actions. procuress commonly used in Egypt for an unchaste female or prostitute.

72.

The people concerned in the nuptials long for the broth.

Those nearest to wealth are often prevented from enjoying it; the great enjoy the least. In this proverb it is supposed that the guests devour all the meat of the nuptial feast, leaving the members of the family to long even for the broth.

73.

Mingle thy sorrow with Zebybe.

Drown your griefs in pleasures. Zebybe is a preparation from the flower of hemp, opium, and honey, excessively intoxicating. It is used among the lower classes and peasants. In Hedjaz this flower of hemp is mixed with raisins (called Zebyb) and tobacco, and is smoked in the Persian pipe; from which mixture the name of Zebybe has probably been derived.
74.

اما بالجمل أو بالجمال أو بصاحب الجمل
(The misfortune) falls either upon the camel, or upon the camel-driver, or upon the owner of the camel.

This expresses that if a person be once unlucky, he is unfortunate in every thing, whether with respect to his family or his business.

75.*

اوقد شمعة ونفض جمعة تلقفي شي قدر الودعة
Light a candle; search for a whole week; thou wilt find something worth a shell.

On fruitless or childish exertions. ٍردة are small white shells brought from the Red Sea, which serve as playthings for children, and as counters in the game of mangal. تلقفي used in Egypt for تلقفي

76.*

الصقر يغطي و الصياد يغطي
The little bird picks its breast, while the sportsman sets his net.

The word عصفور, properly a sparrow, is often used to express any small bird. يغطي in the original sense means to pick the vermin off the head or body of a child. The birds in performing that operation upon themselves always appear to be much pleased. In Egypt it is said of a person يفعل يغطي to express that he is in a thoughtless state of security or happy leisure. (يَفعل يغطي stands for “he does,” and is an auxiliary verb in constant use. (بتفلّم) properly signifying "to fry a piece of meat in the pan;" here means, "to turn the ends of the net-strings in the sportsman's hand, as meat is turned with a spoon in the frying-pan."

77.*

الوحدة ولا القرن السو

To live single rather than have ill-natured companions.

78.*

احتموا ليهودي قال اليوم عيدي

They stood in need of the Jew (to assist them)—this day, said he, is my feast-day.

Addressed to persons unwilling to serve or oblige.

79.*

الف عشيق ولا مستحل

A thousand lovers rather than one Mostahel.

Many lovers or gallants cause less shame to a woman than one Mostahel. According to the Moslim law a person who has once divorced his wife cannot re-marry her, until she has been married to some other man who becomes her legitimate husband, cohabits with her for one night, and divorces her the next morning; after which the first husband may again possess her as his wife. Such cases are of frequent occurrence—as men in the haste of anger often divorce their wives by the simple expression which cannot be retracted. In order to regain his wife a man hires (at no inconsiderable rate) some peasant, whom he chooses from the ugliest that can be found in the streets; but who must engage effectually to consummate the nuptials. A temporary husband of this kind is called Mostahel, and is generally most disgusting to the wife.

80.

What the ant collects in the course of a whole year, the monk eats up in one night.

81.

What does heaven care for the cries of the dogs?

On the indifference of government to the complaints of the lower classes. يبال "to care for" —"be attentive to"; دير بالک "take care."

82.*

The smallest stock of provisions supports (the traveller back) to his home.

is often employed, as here, for one's home or country.
ARABIC PROVERBS.

83.
السرّ معه في بيت الوالي

A secret confided to him may be regarded as if it were (published) in the house of the police officers.

الوالي is the chief officer of police, in whose house every private transaction becomes known.

84.
اعتمى من الشاة ردونا

He gave him the sheep’s ear (for his share).

This relates to unjust or unequal divisions. أسى is used in Egypt for رس 85.

استعى التخل باجعة الدباب

He gave him the vinegar to drink upon the wings of flies.

He devised the most artful and ignominious methods of slowly tormenting him.

86.
وراه التحوم بالنهار

He let him see the stars in day-time.

This proverb is exclusively applied to those who from stinginess keep their own people in such a state of hunger that they become faint, and every object seems black to their eyes.
87.
اَرْقَسُ ٱلْقَرْدُ فِي ۖ ٱلۡمَرۡتَى
When the monkey reigns, dance before him.

88.
الرِّسِي ۖ فِي حَسَابِ ۖ وَٱلۡمَرۡتَى فِي حَسَابِ
The captain (of the ship) means one way, the sailor another.

Of a person who gives such an answer as does not relate to the question asked. حَسَابُ is not used here in its usual sense, of “account,” but stands for لِيَ حَسَب “meaning.” Thus it is said اِرۡوَٰحُ هُنَاكٌ “I meant to go there.”

89.
اَرْدِبُ مَا ۚ مَا ل ۖ لُكَ ۗ لَا تَحۡضُر ۗ كِلَٰٓهُ تَتَغۡيِّرُ دَنۡتَٰكُ وَتَتَعَبُّ فِي شُفَٰهُ
If the eredeb (of corn) does not belong to thee, be not present when it is measured out; (else) thy beard will be dusted, and thou wilt be wearied with the removing of it.

Do not trouble thyself about the business of others, else thou wilt repent it. اَرۡدِبُ the Egyptian corn-measure, equal to about fifteen bushels.

90.
ۖ ٱلۡفَرَّاشُ ۖ ٱلۡشَّاطِرُ مَا يَحۡتَاجُ مِهۡمَارٌ
The clever and active valet wants no one to set him right.

The lazy only require spurs. ٱلۡفَرَّاشُ in Egypt signifies the valet de chambre, who keeps his master's clothes and keys, is the chief among his servants, and generally his confidant. The Egyptians use the word مهماز to express a man who is lazy himself and only occupied in the affairs of others. The Mogrebynns give this name to "spurs." In Egypt شاهر denotes one who is both active and clever in his business.

91.
الغرالة الشاطرة تغزل برجل حمار

A clever spinster spins with an ass's foot (as her distaff).

Of those who do much with small means.

92.
الحيطان لابو اودان

The walls have ears.

اودان for اودان

93.
المدخل بين البصلت وقشرتها ما يخرج آلا بسدنها

He who introduces himself between the onion and the peel, does not go forth without its strong-smell.

On the consequences of intimacy with bad people. صتنا is used in Egypt for "stink" or "bad smell."
94.
المصارين في البطن يضاربوا

(Even) the entrails in the belly quarrel together.

On family broils.

95.
اطعم الفم تستحي العين

Feed the mouth, the eye will be bashful.

Give presents to great people and they will be ashamed not to look upon you with kindness. This saying is very common at Cairo.

96.
ابيع من اخوة يوسف

He sells his friend more easily than the brethren of Joseph sold him.

البائع signifies at Cairo one who abandons his old friends for new, on the slightest prospect of gain. The history of Joseph is very finely told in the Korán.

97.
اطعم من اشعم

(He is) more greedy than Ashab.

98.
اكذب من مسيلة

A greater liar than Moseylama.

These two sayings relate to Ashab and Moseylama, ancient Arabs (the latter a false prophet) remarkable for the vices here imputed to them. These personages are noticed in the following fine verses:

و وعدتي حتي حسبتك مادتا
فجعلت من طمع اجيه و اذهب
فاذًا حضرت انا و انت بمجلس
قالوا مسيلة و هذا اشعب

Thou gavest me thy pledge so that I believed it to be true. In my greedy hopes I went (to thy abode) and turned back. If in society thou and I should meet, People will say, “here is Moseylama—and that is Ashab.”

99.

اتبع الكذّاب لباب الدار

Follow the liar to the gate of his house.

To ascertain whether he has spoken truth. لباب

المية

used in Egypt for 100.*

ايش يبالي البطاح اذا خرب المراح

What does the wolf care if the sheep-fold be destroyed? ببطاح

ذيب—ة-wolf.

101.

الفندرة المتخفية الثكّة و الطانية

Gay or expensive fashions (adopted but) concealed consist in the Tikke and the Takye.

Said of hypocrites or timid persons who declaim against gay fashions, but secretly indulge in them. El Tikke is a sash of silk or muslin, often embroidered, with which the trowsers of men and women are closely tied about the loins, while it remains hidden under the garments. El Takye signifies a white cambric bonnet or cap, frequently embroidered, that is worn close to the head under the red bonnet or Tarbosh. In the Egyptian dialect غندرة means "high gaiety," "fashion," "liberality," "heartiness," "jollity." The words غندرة are very common; being applied also to low people, who in their station and among their own acquaintances affect to be smart and dashing. Those who do not wish or who fear to make themselves too conspicuous by an open display of gay fashions, console themselves by having these two hidden articles of costly materials and expensive workmanship. Both the Tikke and the Takye are among the first tokens of affection sent by a lady to her lover. The Tikke affords subject for many jokes in gay conversation.

102.

ايش انتكر لك يا بصة مع كل عضة دمعة

What can I think of thy good qualities, O onion! as every bite draws tears?

Said of men who in this respect are like the onion. Here is to be understood, and مع مع means for مع anā.

ايش انتكر لك يا بصة من المعاس

103.

They saw a drunken reading (the Koran). Sing, they said, and both thy occupations will resemble each other.

If the verb يقرأ stand by itself, it is often to be understood as يقرأ القرآن

104.

If thou shouldst prove a virtuous woman, hang a jar on my ear.

I shall submit to pain and ridicule if the woman continue virtuous. “as becomes a free-born woman.”

105.

(Of) the slave (take) either the first or the last.

Beware of the pains that must be taken with a half-bred man. Purchase the slave either when he is quite young and raw, so that he may be educated as you please; or when he is full grown and all his good or bad qualities can be discovered.

106.

We bought him (the jackass) to turn the plaster (of Paris) mill; but he proved fit only for the corn mill. On disappointed expectations. جيش gypsum, or plaster of Paris. It requires much greater strength to turn the heavy gypsum mill, than a common corn mill. Almost every respectable house at Cairo has its own mill which is worked by a jackass.

107.

اسم بلا جسم

A name without a body (or reality).

This is said of persons who bear honourable names. Such as مصطفى—مَالح—عبدالله—اَحمد—حس—&c., but whose characters little answer to their names.

108.

السلف تلف

Lending is ruinous (to lenders and borrowers).

There is a similar proverb:

السلفة تربى العداوة

Lending nurses enmity.

سلف in the Egyptian dialect, “to advance or lend money.”

109.

أَعِل اِنْتِ يا شغف لهذا المتكَ

Work thou, O unfortunate person, for this idle Sybarite.

المتك one who sits at ease reclining upon his cushions; and, in general, the idle who enjoy every luxury.
110.

The mother of the coward does not grieve (for him).

She has no cause to grieve for one who never exposes himself to danger.

111.

If the harlot repent, she becomes a procuress.

Similar to this proverb is the following:

If the rose come, we eat and drink near it; if it depart, we do not regret it.

We court the friendship of those whom we afterwards leave with indifference. This proverb alludes to the Eastern custom of having feasts and collations in gardens during the season of roses.
114.

آب عاشق و الأم غريناة و بنهم في الدار حريانة

The father is a lover (of some one not in his own house)—the mother is jealous—the daughter at home is puzzled how to act.

115.

الله لا يجعل لنا جارا و له عينين

God grant us not any neighbour with two eyes.

It is better that our neighbours should be half-blind.

116.

ايش يبالي من يسرق الحمير اذا باع كل جار بدرهم

He who steals the asses, what does he care about selling each of them even for one derhem?

117.*

احكر حر و لو مسه الضر

An honourable man is honourable, even though mishaps should befall him.

حَر signifies here "virtuous," or "honourable," as above (in No. 104). Of this proverb the pronunciation at Cairo is as follows:—

El horr horr

Wa low messoo eddorr,

the ow in low having the sound of ow in the English word owl.
ARABIC PROVERBS.

118.*
المغرّط اولي بالتخسارة

The inconsiderate is the first to lose (or nearest to loss).

Some robbers attacked a house, and the owner was forced to give them a hundred pieces of coin; but these being all base money, the robbers were detected in the bazár, where they went to make purchases. One of them on his way to the scaffold, passed by the house of the person robbed, and reproached him for his cunning; but the man replied, انت المغرط “thou art the inconsiderate person;” which words gave origin to this proverb. There is a common phrase at Cairo, فرطت في الشي الفلوانة “I have foolishly or inconsiderately lost such a thing.” The people of Upper Egypt use the word وذر in the same sense—thus, انا وذرت الشيء—this is probably a corruption of the verb يذر or وذر.

119.*
السَّلِسُ عَدُوُ’ الْعُفَا

The tongue is the neck’s enemy.

Bad language is retorted upon the neck of him who uses it, with a blow.

120.
الصبر علي التعطيب ولا نفعه

To have patience with a friend rather than lose him for ever.

In the dialect of Cairo many terms are used in the sense of “friend.” صاحب denotes the first class of friends—then follows حبيب or صديق—and the superlative is صديق.

121.
الحبس علي التجارة

To haul the rope is incumbent upon the boatmen.

Every one has, and should know, his own business. Here is to be understood الحبل ذهب علي تجارة. The word is the rope by which boats are dragged along the shore of the Nile against the stream. are the boatmen who pull the rope, or peasants hired for that purpose.

122.
القدم يدور و يجي الطاحون

The corn passes from hand to hand, but comes at last to the mill.

However he may turn or shift, he will at last be caught or fall into the hands of his enemy.

123.
أرميه البطر يطلع و في فمه سمكة

Throw him into the river and he will rise with a fish in his mouth.

Said of a lucky or highly fortunate person. البطر is here put for البطر في البطر. The term expresses throughout all Egypt the Nile or البطر النيل. The often added to nouns (as in سمكة) not only marks the feminine gender, but shows precisely that the noun is singular—thus بقرة a single cow, طيارة a single bird; but in common conversation the ئ is frequently added without any particular meaning.

124.*

أسلوبه و العب معه تخسر معه

Advance or lend him (money), and play or joke with him; thou wilt lose by him.

Jocularity with a debtor often causes the loss of the money due.

125.

صلح النية و نام في المرية

Improve or correct thy intentions (preserve a clear conscience) and sleep (without fear) in the desert.

126.

اشتري بدرهم بلج صادله في الحلي نخل

He bought for one derhem some dates; and has now his palm-trees in the village.

Said of boasters—this man wishes others to believe that the dates which he purchased were the produce of his own trees. In Egypt it is generally considered by the peasants as an honour to possess date trees, because they mostly belong to ancient families and cannot easily be purchased. Of similar meaning is the proverb:

صاحب قرآة في الفرس يركب

Let him who owns one kerát of the mare, mount her.

Fine horses and valuable mares are shared among different proprietors, each of whom possesses a certain number of the twenty-four kerâts into which the animal is supposed to be divided.

127.*

الدين سواد التخدين

Debts cause both cheeks to become black.

Debts are a constant shame. سواد انتخد or سواد الوقه is the distinguishing colour of wicked persons on the (Moslim) Day of Judgment. In common discourse it means "shame." The father says to his son, or the friend to his companion, لا تسو وغب "do not blacken my face"—"do not let thy behaviour prove a cause of shame to me."

128.

اوقع من الدبان في العسل

He falls more frequently (or more easily) than flies fall into honey.

اوقع is here used as the comparative of موقع an irregular form often employed by the Egyptians. It is equivalent in meaning to أكثر موقع
129.

الأعيون في بلد العميان طريقة

The one-eyed person is a beauty in the country of the blind.

130.

اين تروح الشمس من الفصارين

Whither can the sun retire from the bleachers?

This alludes to persons who cannot elude the pursuit of their importunate clients. The bleachers are constantly watching for the sun, that they may spread out their cloth or yarn. قصار in the dialect of Egypt, is “a bleacher.”

131.*

اليد الغريبة تحرق البيوت العامرة

The foreign hand destroys the well-conditioned houses.

عامرة signifies both “populous” and “in a good state of repair or cultivation.”

132.

النقوا قد يبول في مسجد قلوا له ما تخاف ربا يستخف

They met a monkey making water in a mosque, “Dost thou not fear,” said they, “that the Lord may transform or metamorphose thee?” (“Indeed,”) replied he, (“I should fear that punishment) if he were to change me into a Gazelle.”

This refers to conceited persons. Gazelles and monkies, according to Eastern nations, represent the extremes of beauty and ugliness. "May God metamorphose thee!" is a common expression of insult; to which is frequently added, "may he change thee into a dog or a hog!" Here is to be understood 133.

العادة طبيعي

Custom is a fifth nature.

Arabian physiologists divide the human character into four natural classes; the choleric (بماوي), the bilious (صراوي), the melancholy (سداوي), and the phlegmatic (بلمعي).

134."

التجار النفس ينظر ما يدخل ما يخرج

The bad neighbour sees only what enters (the house), not what goes out (from it).

He keeps an account of what his neighbour gains, but not of what he expends in charity; i.e., he is blind to your good qualities and only notices your defects.
135.
بعد ما ركب حرك رجليه

After he had mounted, he put his legs in motion (to excite the animal that he rode).

When a man is once firmly established in power, he begins to oppress and tyrannize.

136.*
بعد ما وصل السلام ادعي الشرف

After he had attained to Islam, he affected to be a Sheriff.

Success renders a man bold.

137.*
بدوي مفروج ولفقي تعرم مطروح قال ابن اروح

A miserable Bedouin found a date (that had been) thrown away. “Whither shall I go,” said he, (“to eat it in safety?”)

Trifles become treasures to the poor. مفروج is not used by the Egyptians in its literal meaning “ulcerated,” but generally to express “miserable, pitiable.” They also use تعرم for ثمر “a dry date.”
ARABIC PROVERBS.

138.
بعد ما ناكوها عشرة صات للفغره

After they had ravished her, she called out to the watchmen.

On the hypocrisy of prudes. غفير in the plural—watchmen stationed in different quarters of the town.

139.
بهول الريف عيار

The village saint is a clever impostor.

بهول signifies a living saint or half-mad man. Egypt abounds with fellows of this description, who are well known to be vile impostors. الريف in the usual acceptation of the word, means the open country and villages between Cairo and the Mediterranean Sea. عيار in the Egyptian dialect, a clever active thief, an impostor.

140.

باعت المنارة و اشترت ستارة قال دي هتيكة جنس عبارة

She sold the lamp and bought a curtain (to hide her doings in the bed chamber). "That," said one, "is a scandal under a fine appearance."

هتيكة "scandal." Thus هتكون "they make a public scandal of me." The word جرسة is likewise used in the same sense. جنس عبارة "finely explained, giving a good external appearance."
141.

بعد ما اكل و اتكا قال دارة عيشكم مستكي

After he had eaten and was reclining on the sofa, he said, “thy bread has a smell of mastick.”

When he had fully enjoyed it he began to disparage it. اتكا “he reclined,” as people after dinner, upon sofa-cushions, when coffee is presented to them. عيش in the Egyptian dialect signifies “bread.”

142.

بلدنا صغيرة و نعرف بعضنا

Our town is but small, we all know each other.

This is said when an acquaintance meditates some fraud or deception.

143.

بدل نشيك بقبقابك شيلي شراميطك من اكبابك

Instead of walking upon kabhâbs, take the rags off thy heels.

Provide for the necessaries of life before you enjoy the luxuries. بدل in the Egyptian dialect for بدل—Kabkâbs are stilts or wooden slippers, four or five inches high, upon which the women walk in the baths, and the ladies of genteel rank in their houses. These latter have their kabkâbs ornamented with various sorts of silver tassels, and inlaid with mother of pearl. شرمطة is used by the Egyptians for “a rag ;” also for “a vile slut.” 144.
She has an offensive breath, yet presses forward to get a kiss.
On the ill-founded pretensions of people.

145.*
(That is) a bad exchange, (like giving) a pawn for a bishop.
A saying derived from the game of chess.

146.
Between Hána and Bána our beards were lost.

This proverb owes its origin to a story resembling one which La Fontaine has related. Hána and Bána were the wives of an elderly man—one plucked out his grey hairs, the other his black, and so left him without any. In Egypt there are other terms, like Hána and Bána, used merely because they sound almost alike: thus “he went to Khirt Birt” (خَرْت بِرَت), which means that he travelled upon a foolish errand; or “he went to Hersh Mersh” (خَرْش مِرْش), implying that he did not succeed in his business, or else that he was placed in a state of mortification or disgrace, which might be expressed by the English saying, “he was sent to Coventry.” (Other words without any literal signification used in this manner, will occur hereafter.) It may here be remarked that many facetious stories long current in Europe, are of Arabian origin.

147.

بَكَيَ اَمِّي عَلَى فِراق الْجَنَّةَ

(Like) the lamentation of Adam on his departure or separation from Paradise.

This is said of unavailing grief, chiefly of lamentation for the deceased.

148.

بَانَت جَيِعَانَة وَزَوْجِهَا خَبَازٌ

She went to sleep hungry, (although) her husband is a baker.

Those nearest to plenty sometimes experience want. جَيِعَانَة in Egypt used for جايدة

149.

بَلَد مَا تَعَرَّف فِيهَا اَعْمَل مَا تَشَهِّي فِيهَا

In a town where thou knowest nobody, do whatever thou likest.

Most people are ashamed only of those by whom they are known. Here is to be understood بلد التي ما تعرف فيها واحد

150.

بَيْتُ نَاعُل مُنِه لا تَدْعِي عَلَيْه بالْتَخْرَابِ

A house from which thou eatest, do not pray for its destruction.
ARABIC PROVERBS.

151.
A well from which thou drinkest, throw not a stone into it.

152.
Roast them only, do not burn them.

Too violent measures cause us to lose the expected profits. This is the roasting of coffee-beans in small iron pans, according to the Eastern custom; these pans are called محمرة The word بس is of the Syrian or Egyptian dialect and much used; it means "only," "at all events," "nothing more," "this will do," &c.; at other times it is merely a superfluous particle, or an expletive without meaning, annexed to some phrase.

153.
Selling and buying, and nothing upon the board.

Equivalent to the saying, "great cry and little wool." طبلة is a round board on which the pedlars who walk about the streets expose their goods for sale.

154.
(Like) a hawk over a scare-crow (i.e., flying about it).

To designate a person of meddling disposition, who never remains a moment quiet. is a particular sort of scare-crow, made of thin pieces of wood, and used in the gardens about Cairo.

155.

ترك الذنب ولا طلب المغفرة

He left off sinning, but never asked forgiveness.

Said in allusion to those who think it sufficient if they discontinue their bad actions, but never make atonement or solicit pardon for those they have already committed.

156.

تابت الفاحسة ليلة تالت ولا والتي يمسك الفاحش

A harlot repented for one night. "Is there no police officer," she exclaimed, "to take up or lay hold of harlots?"

Those who have been sinners themselves are often the least indulgent towards others; and on the slightest repentance they claim the privilege of rigid virtue. (plural تمحب) the term used at Cairo to express a harlot or public woman. η is an exclamation. the chief police officer at Cairo. He is also entitled exclusively "El Aga."
157.

تعالوا في دي الزجة ناظر لبليط

Come, let us circumcise the kalyt in this crowd.

A proverb ironically expressing that this is not the proper time or place for a business in question. لبليط is a person suffering from certain tumours which sometimes affect even children at Cairo; and which would render the operation of circumcision extremely tedious and troublesome. Kalyt among the vulgar is a nickname frequently applied.

158.

تعالي بلا دعوة اتعدي علي دي الفرة

Come, (my dear,) without any (more) quarrelling, sit down upon this pelisse.

Said in ridicule of the means employed by a husband to coax his wife into good humour. دي دعوة In the Egyptian dialect signifies "complaint," "quarrel." To spread a pelisse that another may sit upon it is a mark of great respect and attention.

159.

تموت الحدایة و عينها في التخلط

The falcon dies and his eye is (still) upon the seizure (of his prey).

The tyrant continues a tyrant to his last breath. حدایة an ash-grey falcon of the smaller species, common throughout Egypt and Syria. the action of seizing or carrying off prey. The verb خطف is constantly employed to express the carrying off plunder by soldiers from peasants and shop-keepers.

160.

تطلق النار و تصبع الحريق

Thou kindlest the flame, and criest "fire."

161.

تكون نار تصبع رماد

It may be a fire; on the morrow it will be ashes.

Violent passions easily subside.

162.

تأخذ من الحافي نعله

Thou takest from the sore-footed his sandal.

Thou ruines the man completely. حافي means not only "bare-footed," but one who has the sole of his foot sore from walking.

163.

تبوس الحريف تقلع اسانته

Thou kisst thy lover, and tearest out his teeth.

On the greediness of bad women. الحريف properly means "a rival;" but in Egypt is generally used for "a lover:" it signifies also at Cairo a partner at the chess or backgammon board.
164.

تقرأ الزبور علي أهل القبور

Thou readest the Psalms to the inhabitants of the tombs.

Thou doest what nobody else does. The Psalms are seldom read by Moslems, because they assert that the Christians have interpolated them; yet they acknowledge that David was inspired by heaven when he composed and sung them. Nobody thinks, however, of reading or reciting to the dead.

165.

تَمْسَكْنُوا حَتَّى تَمْكِنُوا

They behaved like poor honest people until they were firmly established.

On the artful system of Eastern governors. تَمْسَكْنُوا from the word مسكن which means not only "poor" or "humble," but also "honest;" a sense probably arising from the circumstance that in Eastern countries poor people only are honest. It sometimes implies likewise a reproach of stupidity; thus رجل مسكن "a poor, honest fool," and perhaps for a reason similar to the former; because here no one is ever blamed for cheating or deceiving others, but for allowing himself to be cheated. Few who have talents and cunning condescend to be honest; so that honesty is rather depreciated, or found only among poor fools.
166.

تَبَيّضَ بَيْضَ مَدْوَرٍ وَتَتَّبَعَ فِرْعَوْنَ هِدْدَةٍ

He lays round eggs and asks for young turkeys (to proceed from them).

On unreasonable expectations. The turkey egg is oval, while the pigeon egg (here meant) is nearly round.

167.

تَصَارَبَ الْرَّحَمُ وَالْمَجِرُ قَالَ الْمَرَابِكُ دِي نُوْبَةٍ وَقُتِّعَ عَلِيْنا

*Wind and sea combat—"this time," said the ships, "we shall have the worst of it."

When two rivals contend for the government, the subjects are most to be pitied. نوبه في the Egyptian dialect means "for once," "this time." نوبه وقعت علينا "for once it has fallen upon us;" i.e., the misfortune. There is also a saying نوبة جيت علينا "for once or this time it has come upon us," (i.e., the goodhap,) or "we shall be gainers." جيت جات used in Egypt for جات

168.

نَخْرِي الْرَّيْحَ بَعْدَ لا يِشْتَيِ السَّفَانَ

The wind blows as the sailors do not wish.

On untoward circumstances in general. اجري اجري "to run;" it implies also any other kind of rapid motion.
169.

Under this (fine) apparel a he-goat (is hidden).

A he-goat (تيس) is, among Arabs, the emblem of a stupid clown. اسكت يا تيس “be silent, thou goat,” is a phrase often heard in the bázârs.

170.

The crown of a good disposition is humility.

مرة in the Egyptian dialect does not merely signify what belongs to the بشر—what is manly, but in general “good disposition,” “kindness,” “zeal.” It is said of a person صاحب مروة “who likes to be serviceable to others,” “who is honestly zealous in his business.” ما له شي مروة مالوش مروة “a cold egotist.”

171.

A borrowed cloak does not keep one warm.

We best enjoy what is our own property.
172.

The ox that ploughs is not to be muzzled.

This was a precept of the Jewish law. See Deuteronomy xxv, 4. We must necessarily trust to those whom we employ in any business. ينكمم comes from a muzzle made of ropes, closely tied to the mouths of oxen, camels, and other cattle, to prevent their grazing in the fields of strangers in passing along the road; for there are not in Egypt any inclosures.

173.

Three (persons) if they unite against a town will ruin it.

The smallest number of evil-disposed persons, if well united, can work considerable mischief.

174.

His gown is full of holes; he thrusts out his hand at whatever place he likes.

Poverty is sometimes an advantage, as it insures freedom of action.

175.*

A serpent upon a dung-cake was swimming in a dirty
... said, (indeed,) "nothing suits this stinking pond better than this ship of dirt and this filthy spectator" (i.e., the serpent).

The dried cakes of cattle-dung are called جذة—used as fuel in the East. A common term for "serpent" in Egypt is حبة—a great serpent is called ثعبان—and this name is likewise given to the eel.

 Forgiveness

176.*

جمه الشرk ولا عبد العرب

The oppression of Turks, rather than the justice of Arabs.

By the term Arabs are here meant the Bedouins, who, in the Mammelouk times, most grievously oppressed the open country of Egypt. The Bedouins themselves often call their nation exclusively "Arab," a term they use more frequently than "Bedou;" and all other Arabians, who are not of Arab tribes, they distinguish by the appellation of Hadhary or Fellah, which with them are terms of reproach or contempt.
177.*

The tyranny of the cat, rather (or is better) than the justice of the mouse.

The mouse bears a much worse character in the East than in the West; "wily, insidious, rapacious," are the gentlest epithets applied to her. Mice are certainly a great nuisance in Egypt, where the open country (as well as every town) abounds with them to such a degree, that I have known instances of families being actually driven from their homes by the numbers and rapaciousness of the mice and rats, that spared neither victuals nor furniture. جور signifies "unjust, violent, oppressive behaviour."

178.

I came to utter an imprecation against him, and found the wall inclining over him.

It is unnecessary to revile a person who is already crushed by universal opprobrium. ماهل عليه "inclining over him," "ready to fall upon him."

179.

The fool has his answer on the edge of his tongue.

The fool answers without reflection, whatever comes first into his mind. نحس here means "a fool," not merely “vile or bad.” The following verse is quoted on the same subject:

1

هذین العقلِ في قلبِه و قلبِ الحيَّي في نحُو
The tongue of the wise is in his heart,
The heart of the fool is in his mouth.

180.

جواب الامْتن السكات عنه
Silence is the (best) answer to the stupid.

السكات عنه means likewise “to leave him alone.”
leave him alone is a common expression, signifying “neither speak to him nor meddle with him.”

181.

جا عند الزنادقة يكفر
He came to the impious to blaspheme.

He did what was superfluous, because all his companions did the same. With a similar meaning the Arabs say تحصيل حامل “a (second) receipt for what has already been settled,” or equally superfluous actions.

182.

جا التخروم يعلم ابنه الرعي
The lamb came to teach its father how to feed.

183.

جا و ليعلموا خيل الباشا فدّدت السكينه رجلها
They came to shoe the horses of the Pâshâ; the beetle then stretched out its leg (to be shod).

On ridiculous pretensions.
184.

The camel crouches down on the place of another camel.

This is said when one great dignitary dies and another immediately takes his place. In travelling, the places where the camels repose on the evening station are distinguished from the surrounding country, and caravans usually halt at the same spots.

185.*

A well is not to be filled with dew.

This is said when trifling presents are offered to a powerful person who is known to be greedy.

186.

I came to the scabby-headed (person) to be amused in his company; he uncovered his head and frightened me.

Friendship ceases when a person's real character is known.

187.

One came to count the waves of the sea; he erred (in the reckoning). "There are (at all events) more coming than going," he said.

On paltry expedients to conceal ignorance or negligence. The expression جيابات أكثر من الرياحات is likewise often used to console a person for some disappointment, and then it means "one opportunity is lost, but another will present itself." جيابات in the Egyptian dialect for جيابات

188.

 mereka يحلبوا التيس ضربا

They came to milk the goat; he br-br ke w—nd.

The stupid clown disappoints those who require his services.

189.

جهد المنفّع دموعه

The efforts of the poor are his tears.

The poor can only weep for the misfortunes of others, but are not able to alleviate them; this is a frequent apology for withholding assistance.

190.

جاك معلِّمك

Thy neighbour is thy teacher.

We learn from our companions.

191.

جوع العملة في رأس الاقرع

(Like) the hunger of the louse upon the head of the scabby.

Is said when a person in affluence pleads poverty.
192.*

جا الهم عند الهم جدحت

_Grief came to converse with grief._
The afflicted cannot console the afflicted.

193.*

جنارة غريب لا وراء ولا قدامه

_(Like) the burial of a stranger, no one goes before and no one behind him._

This is said of a person who retires from office without the regret of any one. لا وراء is to be understood as لا وراد احد

194.*

جندي ما قبل شبع ططرور

_The (intercession of the) soldier was not accepted, he (then) sent the soldier’s cap (to intercede for him)._

If the patronage of the master cannot serve, that of the servant can be of little avail. In Egypt جندي implies a horse soldier, in opposition to a foot soldier or عسكري _The Egyptians use شبع as the common term for “to send.” ططرور is the high woollen or fur cap worn by the horsemen, called _delly_ or _delaty._

195.

جنة ترعها الخنازير

_A paradise in which hogs feed._

Said of a beautiful woman whose husband is ugly.
196.

جهلٌ يعولني خيرٌ من عقل اعوله

Ignorance that supports me is better than wisdom which I must support.

Rather take from the fool, than give to the wise.

197.

جهلك اشد من كفرک

Thou art more ignorant even than thou art impious.

Verbatim: "thy ignorance is stronger than thy impiety." The word کافر is a very common term of insult among the Moslem Egyptians themselves, and means, when applied by one of them to another, "impious."

198.

الجمل في شيء والجمال في شيء

The camel has his projects, and the camel driver has his projects.

The interests of the governor and the governed are never alike. في شيء is here to be understood as نية في شيء.

199.*

جلس حيث يخذ بيدك و تبذل لا حديث يخذ برجلك و نظر

Sit down when thou art taken by the hand and when thou receivest presents; and not when they lay hold of thy leg and drag thee (away).

Visit only where thou art welcome. With respect to the expression يوخذ بيدك some remarks shall be offered hereafter.

200.

Is thy mother-in-law quarrelsome? Divorce her daughter.

Cut up the evil by the root. The mother and daughter will leave thy house together.

201.

(In truth) my lover is a fine fellow, and he wears a straw turban.

Said in derision of a ridiculous spark. يتعمم “to tie,” and “to wear a turban.” نخ are the mats made of dry reeds in which is packed the charcoal sent to Cairo from the country about Thebes.
202.

Afflicted, because she has no cows; she twisted her hair into a whip.

Said of one who consoles himself for the want of enjoyments by mere phantasms. ٌرَخْوُ—The word ٍشَعْرَةُ must not be confounded with ٍشَعْرُ or "hair," although I have so translated it; this latter means the "hair of the head;" but ٍشَعْرَةُ those hairs which in the East
it is usual to shave off or remove by a depilatory, although the slovenly peasant-women often allow them to grow for months.

203.*

Afflicted at having no house, she bought a broomstick and some oil.

Of the same signification as the proverb immediately preceding.

204.

Aggrieved because she had no eyes, she purchased a looking-glass for two derhems.

Of the same import. مَراِةٌ for مَراِيةٌ
205.

حسينا حساب اللؤية و العقرب و ام اربعة و اربعين ما

In our account we reckoned the serpent and the scorpion; but the “erba wa erbayn” was not in our reckoning.

We have not taken proper precautions against the most dangerous enemy. The “erba wa erbayn” is a small spider-like insect, which is said to have forty-four feet, whence it derives its name. It is reputed extremely venomous. I never happened to see one.

206.

حلبوا قردة كشط فالوا اللب اللي يعجي من دي

الوجه حرام

They milked a monkey; she drew back in a surly manner. “The milk,” said they, “which comes from (one with) that face is (surely) bad stuff.”

The wretch who with affectation and grimace refuses to assist others by a service that would reflect honour on himself, will never do any good. يكش in the Egyptian dialect means “to draw back sulkily,” or like a prude or coquette, if any one approach too near. حرام not only signifies “unlawful” or “forbidden,” but in common speech, “worthless.”

K
207.

\[\text{جَاثَةٌ بَلَا جَاهَدَ مَسْحُ حَامِر} \]

\textit{Anger without power (is) a blow ready.}

If a person become angry with another to whom he is inferior in strength, he may expect to receive a blow. جَاثَةٌ in the Egyptian dialect signifies "anger," as well as "stupidity." It is said, "I became angry with him." جَاهَدَ is "official power, influence, importance, patronage derived from rank or wealth." مَسْحُ equivalent to نَفاٰ "a blow on the neck."

208.

\[\text{جَلَّي مِنَ عَامَودٍ لَعَامَودِ لَعَلَّ يَانِيَ فَرَج} \]

\textit{Loose me from pillar to pillar; perchance it may cause liberation.}

Loose my chains from one pillar, and fasten them to another, said a prisoner, perhaps in so doing I may effect my release. This signifies, that the unfortunate grasp at the most trifling circumstance in hopes of relief. Among other meanings فَرَجٌ implies deliverance, relief, return of good luck, an opening to happier circumstances. In this sense God is styled فَرَجٌ—and when Arabs pray for deliverance from misfortunes they always address him by this name, and say يَا فَرَجٌ The expression فَرَجٌ is often used in like manner to console a person, and then means "hope the best!"
209.

A storm in the shop of a glass-dealer.

Signifying that a thing is quite out of place.

210.

He put him into the basket of Meloukhye; he came out of the basket of Bādenjān.

Said of one who is continually running about and seen almost at the same time in different parts of the town, always in great haste. The Meloukhye is corchorus olitorius, a favourite vegetable among the Egyptians. Bādenjān, the egg-plant, is likewise much esteemed by them.

211.

Afflicted because she had no house, she made a livery stable of the hole (in which she lived).

On the ridiculous attempts of poor people to imitate the great, or to appear rich. A “hole,” more particularly foramen ani. In derision this term is applied to a small dirty place where poor persons live. A public stable wherein cows are kept in the town at that season when the open country is inundated. Similar stables are found in every quarter of the town, and the cows kept therein furnish Cairo with milk during the inundation.
212.

جَبِّ رِغْيفُ بِرِغْيفِ لاَ بْدِ سَیْ لَابه

Rub a loaf against a loaf, no doubt of its crumbs (coming forth).

Set two men of equal powers against each other, their true character will appear from that experiment.

213.

حَوْلَ بَابِ اسْتَبِلَكَ

Remove the gate of thy stable to another side.

This is generally said on averting the danger of the evil eye. If a house is reputed of evil omen (شوم), the owner usually walls up the gate, and opens one at another side, by which he hopes to avert the baneful consequences of the evil eye of his enemies. اسْتَبِلَ (استبل) is the origin of "stabulum," a stable.

214.

حَلْوَ الْلِّسَانِ بِعْدِ الْحَسَنِ

Sweet of tongue (but) of far distant beneficence.

Said of a hypocrite.

215.

حَسَبًا فِي الْبِيْداَ رِجَالٌ

We thought that there were men in the desert.

Said of persons whose cowardice has disappointed our expectations. حسب is often employed in the sense of "thinking;" thus حسبت انب تجني "I thought thou lovedst me." 216.
حكمة القوي على الضعيف
(Like) the government of the strong over the weak.
Applied to unjust oppressions in private life.

217.
حرسة صبرت بيتها عمرت
A virtuous woman had patience (with her husband), hers house flourished (or continued well peopled).

البيت عمرت means here "to be peopled," or to continue inhabited by all its inmates; in opposition to بيتها خربت words which would have been used if her husband had divorced her and she had left the house: here is to be understood حرسة أن صرت

218.
حديكم طيّب و بيتنا بعيد
Your talking is fine, but our house is far distant.

In spite of all your fine reasoning I am far from complying with your desire. حديث is often used in Egypt synonymously with كلام as the verb يتحدث is used instead of يتكلم

219.*
حدبا عرجا و يدها اليمنين فلاتها
Crook-backed, limping, her right hand trembling.

Denoting a woman afflicted with every kind of misery. نالج in the Egyptian dialect, means one who labours under a tremor produced by extreme debility. Instead of يمین—because is feminine; but the Egyptians very often confound the genders. It may, however, be possibly understood here as بی‌ها من جانب اليمین.

220.

حَبْب الحَبَّ و بَغْصَ الطَرَب

May the ulcer (of the Franks) love thee, and the Lord hate thee.

Addressed to a hypocritical enemy who assures us of his friendship, and says, “I love thee,” or انا احبك The word الحب is here put for تحب “the ulcer of the Frank,” or “the French disease.”

221.

حاسدتها تعر في شعرتها

May her envier stumble over her hair.

An imprecation against the enemy or jealous rival of a woman. تعر in the Egyptian dialect for تعر See above, No. 202, for a remark on شعرة —It means, “may he be unlucky whenever he approaches her.”

222.

حَبْب تَنْقَل الميزان

A single grain makes the balance heavier.

Where two parties of equal power contend, a very slight accession of strength will decide the question in favour of one. تنقل 223.

حبلة و قفزة و قدمها أربعة

She is with child, and nurses a child, and has four (children) before her.

On affluence of riches.

224.

حساب القوار على الدوار

The (broken) pots are put to the account of the retailer.

Great people make the poor pay for the mishaps that befall them. قوار in the Egyptian dialect “pots and jars of earth.” It is to be understood here الدوار The name of the الدوار is given to those who carry the earthenware upon their heads about the streets, on account of the manufacturers. If any of them should break, those who carry them are responsible to their principals.

225.

حلم القطط كالنيران

The dream of the cat is all about the mice.

226.

حلفا و يتحاشر النار

(Like) dry reeds and (still) keeps company with the fire.

Most likely to suffer from the calamity yet imprudently exposing himself to it. حلفا is the arundo epigeios, that grows particularly in Upper Egypt in districts which are not regularly inundated: the poor people use it as fuel. يحاشر is the Egyptian pronunciation of ياعشر The lower classes frequently pronounce the like ح thus they say ح for ح—also ح for ح— Likewise ح for ح—but the same people pronounce the ح strongly in other words when it is placed at the beginning or end of them.

227.*

حببك من حبه ولكان نرد

Thy beloved is the object that thou lovest, were it even a monkey.

Love is blind.

228.

خبر الزاد ما حصل في الفواد

The best food is that which fills the belly.

Such is the true though not the literal meaning. حصل is taken here for the whole of the intestines. حصل “to reach, to arrive at, to hit, to fulfil one’s purpose, to satiate.”
229.

خطبوها تمنعت تركوها تطلعت

They wooed her, and she resisted; they left her, and she then fell in love.

On the whims of those who capriciously oppose the wishes of others. تطلعت among several significations, means, in the Egyptian dialect, the same as تشوق “to fall in love,” because it is understood علي العاشق 230.

خباز و محتمسب

Baker and (at the same time) Mohteseb.

His interest will cause him to lose sight of his duty. Mohteseb is the public officer who super-intends the legal price and weight of the provisions sold in the bázár.

231.*

خذني بختك من جرح اختك

Take thy luck from the lap of thy sister.

A poor woman complained that she had not any children, her sister had half-a-dozen little ones in her lap, and did not know how to supply them with food. The person is therefore advised to take warning from her and not to form rash wishes.
232.

The dirt of labour rather than the saffron of indolence.

Rather to be busy were it even in dirty work or labour of little profit, than to be indolent though in possession of luxuries.

233.

A vinegar seller does not like (another) vinegar seller.

On the "jalousie de métier." At Cairo the name of is given to the sellers of pickles; cucumbers, turnips, onions, badenjâns (egg-plants) preserved in date vinegar are favourites with the Egyptians.

234.

Acquire learning and information (even if they come) from the mouths of cows.

Never object to any source from which you may derive useful knowledge. is the snout of a hog, and generally applied to any ugly mouth.

235.

Take from the (bad) debtor were it but a stone.

Do not refuse from a bad debtor whatsoever he may pay on account. In receiving a small part of a considerable debt, it is often said,

شعة من التخزين احسن من ذقنه

A single bristle of the hog is better than all his (the bad debtor’s) beard.

236.

خنفسة علي مكنسة داخلة المستراح قال انظر الحامل المحمول
و دار الواءلة

A beetle upon a broomstick was entering the privy; “look,” said one, “at the carrier, the carried, and the hotel!”

The دار الواءلة are public khans at Cairo, where strangers halt and merchandise is deposited. The abridged saying, “look at the carrier and the carried,” is often quoted on seeing a mean looking man riding upon a wretched Rosinante.

237.

خردة بلا عدة

Toys without instruments.

خردة small ware and other toys sold usually in the same shop. عدة implements used in the different crafts. The saying implies, “fuss about trifles,” “much ado about nothing.” A man keeps toys in his shop, but not any useful or necessary implements.
238.

خَلَّاهَا عَلَى الْأَرْضِ السَّوْدَا

He left her upon the black ground.

He ruined her completely. In taking away her mat, the poorest article of household furniture, he left her to sit upon the bare floor.

239.

خَيَار النَّاسِ مَن كَسَبَ عَلَيْهِ

Those are (esteemed) the best people through whom one gains.

The expression علي يَد مَن كَسِبَ عَلَيْهِ or علي يَدِ الَّذين كَسِبُوا "upon whose hand they gained," i.e., through whose interference or medium.

240.

خَيَار الْبِرّ عَاجِلٌ

The best generosity is that which is quick.

241.

خِسَرْ ما تَعْمَلُ شَرًا مَا تَلْقَى

Do no good—thou shalt not find evil.

On ingratitude.

242.

خَلَّوا الْغَزْلَ المَتَخَبَّلِ لَدَيْ الْفَلِبِ المَدْبَلِ

Leave the entangled yarn to be untwisted by the effeminate or pusillanimous.

The word مَلَخَبِثٌ مَثُلٍ، intricately interwoven, intricate, disordered; this sense is likewise expressed by the word المَدْبَلٍ.
in the Egyptian dialect for ذابل signifies "effeminate," "weak-hearted," "unable to make exertion." This saying means that the business must be suited to the capacity or character of a man, and the puny or weak-hearted must be employed in women's work.

243.*

خاوي البطن و يمضغ لبان

Of empty stomach, yet he chews incense.

A hungry beggar, yet affecting the manners of great people. It is a common practice in Egypt among the higher classes to chew incense in order to sweeten the breath; or, as it is said, to facilitate digestion.

244.

خذ من عقله و حطه في المرجونة

Take his understanding and put it into the basket (at thy back).

Said in derision of a person's understanding. مرجونة is a small basket which the poor Nubians, who come to try their fortunes at Cairo, sling upon their back, and carry in it their food and miserable luggage.

245.

خير المال ما وجهة وجهه

Those are the best riches which are spent in their proper place.

Literally, "which are directed towards the proper side." 246.

خیر الناس من نرح للناس بالخیر

He is the chosen of the people who rejoices in the welfare of others.

247.

الخراق يلحم بالزن

With gentleness the fracture is repaired.

With politeness and softness a reconciliation can be effected in quarrels. This refers to the common saying, “a hole has been bored in the friendship,” or “friends have been disunited.”

248.

التخضوع عند الحاجات رجولية

To be humble when we want (the help of others) is manliness.

This maxim is deeply impressed on the minds of people in the East. الحاجات “affairs,” “business,” “wants,” “demands from others,” &c.

249.

اخرج الطمع من قلبك يحل الفيد من رجلك

Expel avidity from thy heart; the fetters will be loosened from thy foot.

Be contented, and thou wilt be free.
250.

خَلَوَهُ يَمْهَ اخْذَ واحِدةٍ تَدْرُ آمَهُ

Leave him alone with his grief—he has taken one as old as his mother.

Of one who deserves his misfortunes. The man had married an old woman, and might therefore have expected from the first not to be very happy with her. اخْذ is often used for زَوَّج “he married.” تَدْر “similar to anything in quantity or quality;” often employed in the same sense as مِثَل.

251.

خَذْهَا مِنْ سِكرَانٍ وَلَا تَخْذِهَا مِن مَّاحِي

Take (the wine) from the drunkard and do not take it from the sober.

The sober will more probably betray thee in this instance than the drunkard. The خَذْهَا هنا refers to خمْر or “wine.” مَّاحِي “one who is awake,” “in possession of his senses,” “sober.”

252.

خَذْ الْكِتَابَ مِنْ عَنَانِهِ

Take the book by its title; or, take the letter by its address.

The first view teaches us to judge of a person’s character, and whether he be a fit object for a nearer acquaintance. Such is generally thought in the East, where a Lavaterian system of physiognomy prevails. Every governor of a province is a physiognomist, and fancies that he can ascertain in the looks or mien of those brought before him which is the guilty party. A prepossessing face has more influence in the East than in Europe; but the rules of physiognomy are never strictly analysed, and it is chiefly from the expression of the eyes and the state of the eyebrows and nose that an opinion is formed.

253.

خیزه مخبوز و ماء، في الكوز

His bread is kneaded and his water is in the jug.

كوز

is a small earthen or tin jug, by which water is taken out of the large jars that stand in the vestibule of each house in Egypt.

254.

خذ بلاشي قال ما يسع البلى

Take it for nothing. ("No," he said, "my sack is not large enough (to contain it)."

On the great luck of some to whom more is offered than they can accept. تلیس is a sack of black or white and black striped goat hair, in which the peasants carry their corn to market. بلاشي for is the common expression in Egypt for "gratis."

255.

خذ طينة و اضربها في الحيط لن ما لزنت ارته

Take a piece of mud, strike it against the wall, if it do not stick it will leave a mark.

On the effects of slander.
256.

خیال خرا و یروع فی النخل

A bad rider—yet he gallops about among the date-trees.

This is said of the ignorant who affect to display learning. خرا "dirt," is often used to express a "thing as bad as dirt," "useless," "miserable." یروع "to set off the horse in full gallop," "to ride at full speed." To gallop among date-trees is of course difficult on account of the numerous turnings.

257.

خذ اللَّه قبَل ان یاخذک

Take the thief before he take thee.

258.

خذ بیدی الیوم اخذ بِرجلک غدا

Take me by the hand to-day, I will take thee by the foot to-morrow.

Be kind to me now, I will hereafter return the favour two-fold. خذ بیدی "take my hand," or "assist me." The beggars at Cairo constantly say الله یاخذ بید الكريم "God assists the charitable and generous." الله یاخذ بیدک "May God assist thee." The expression "I will take thee by the foot," means that on a future occasion I will assist thee more powerfully than thou assistest me at present.
259.

خاطر من استغني برايه

He exposes himself (to danger) who regards his own counsel or opinion as sufficient.

استغني here is here in the same sense as استغني. But this is not the usual signification of the word in Egypt, where it commonly means “not to be in want of.” Thus a very frequent expression is استغني عنه “I do not want it,” “I can dispense with it.”

260.

خذ القليل من الليم وذمه

Take the merest trifle from the vile and abuse him (at the same time).

The miser deserves no better treatment. الليم is here put for الخيل “the miser.” الليم properly signifies “to reproach a person with his bad qualities,” ذكر العياب

حروف الدال

261.

دار الظلم خراب و لو بعد حين

The house of the unjust oppressor is (or must be) destroyed, though it should happen in distant times.
262.
диа́р مص‌ر خيّرها لغريّبها
The riches of Egypt are for the foreigners therein.

Since the time of the Pharaohs Egypt has never been governed by national rulers, but constantly by foreigners. دار مصر is said in the same sense as دار الثوب or دار فور

263.
دخيل شيء في أنرامه ما بقي يخرج
Something has entered into his back teeth that will never come out again.

This is applied to a person who cannot rid himself of a disagreeable companion or confidant. The word بَقيّ pronoiced "baka," is constantly employed as an adverb, sometimes quite superfluously and without any meaning; at other times it signifies "now," "again," "then," "never."

264.
دمع الفواجّر حواسر
The tears of the adulteress are ever ready.

265.
دار و بابه ما يغتر الفار فيها بلبابه
A house with its gate—and the monk cannot find a crumb of bread in it.

On the stinginess of a person in easy circumstances. "A house with its gate," implies that it is a well-conditioned dwelling. یعمر for "to stumble," "to make a false step," and therefore "to sin;" likewise "to find," or "light upon." باب is often used synonymously with باب—at other times it means a "by-gate." The gates which inclose the interior quarters of the town are called باب.

266.

دبّ لا يحلب ولا يعجب ولا يركب
(Like) a bear that is neither to be milked, nor to be led in parade, nor to be ridden.

Said of a useless clown. دبّ often pronounced دب is a "bear." Turks from Anadolia sometimes exhibit bears in shows at Cairo. A large party of those Turks came in 1814 from Romelia to Cairo with half-a-dozen bears. The people then said, that in Mohammed Aly's country (he is a native of the sea coast of Romelia,) every man was a dancing master to a bear, and that the pasha had sent for them to remind him of his youthful pursuits. On the spreading of this report the bears and their masters were immediately banished from the country. يعجب comes from جنب a horse led in parade before a great man in public processions.

267.

دسومهم عالية و بطنهم خاليت
Their boilers are high; their stomachs are empty.

Costly furniture in a house, but no provisions nor money. دُسَت دُسَت is the plural of دُسَت “a boiler,” or دُسَت “large pan.”

268.

دَق علي الباب قال من دا قال كس بلش قال ادخل دا لوا اكن سمن الموت

There was a knock at the door. “Who is there?”

“A wench for nothing.” “Enter,” he said, “even if thou wert the poison of death.”

What is given gratis is always acceptable; and according to that rule no one in the East, from the lowest to the highest, refuses a present. On this subject the following proverb also is cited:

اللي بلش كثر منه اللي بفولس حوو عنه

What is for nothing, get still more of it; what is for money, avoid it.

حَوَو عنه “take another road that you may not meet it.” من هذا for this دا is the common interrogation at Cairo for “who is there?” In Syria they say مِن هو هذا and likewise مِن دا مِن دا instead of مِن هو هذا مِن دا.

كس is not properly “a wench,” its true meaning may be found in the dictionaries. It is a term heard much more frequently in public than Europeans would suppose, who generally entertain very false notions concerning the modesty and decency of the Easterns, with respect at least to language.
269.

The worms of the vinegar are of the vinegar itself.

This is said when something disagreeable happens in a family caused by one of its ill-natured members.

270*

Leave (or do not think on) what is spoiled, but eat the good things (that are before thee).

The sense of this proverb is expressed in the following ancient verses:

خذ من زمانك ما صفا ودع الذي فيه الكدر
فالعمر أقصر من معاتبة الزمان علي الفير

271.

The box went in search of its lid until it met with it.

On a person's eagerly watching an opportunity and at last finding it. احتن is a small box made of ivory or bone wherein perfumes, balm, civet, musk, &c., are sold. في in the Egyptian dialect often implies, as here, the same as حتى and then means "until."
272.
الدراهم مراهم

Money is sweet balm.

It heals all wounds. Such is the general opinion in the East.

273.
الذابة تساوي مفرعة

The animal is worth (no more than) a whip.

As much as to say "it is worth nothing." مفرعة is a scourge or whip made of date-branches cut into thin slips, still holding together like a harlequin's wand: children play with it. تساوي "it is equal," "it is like," and more usually "it is worth." In Egypt it is pronounced as if written يساوًا—thus they say, يساو "what is it worth?" "what is the price of it?"

274.
دوا الدهر الصبر عليه

The remedy against (bad) times is to have patience with them.

In their nervous language the ancient Arabs said,

واكلت دكوك اربعين و اربعًا فاصبر لكلتي و عصبة نابي

Thou hast eaten (or enjoyed) thy age for forty-four years; wait then when it preys upon thee with its back teeth.

الدهر is sometimes limited to the space of forty-four years, or the computed age of man.

275.

دنياك ما انت فيه

(That is) thy world wherein thou findest thyself.

Enjoy the present moment.

ما انت فيه stands for الشيء ما انت فيه or احتال ما انت فيه The thing which is of the feminine gender.

حرف الذال

276.*

ذكرنا مصر لفترة قامت باب اللوق بحشيضاها

They mentioned Mısır to Kahera; on which Bāb el Look rose with its weeds.

In ridicule of those who push themselves forwards to attract notice while nobody pays them attention. They mentioned  Mısır (or Fostát, the first-built Moslim city, southward of the present Cairo,) to Kahera, the town erected by the Fatemites, on the north of Fostát. Bāb el Look is a small and at present half-ruined quarter formerly belonging to to Fostát, but now included within the environs of Southern Cairo; it is in many places quite deserted and abounds with grass and weeds; it had, therefore, but slight pretensions for standing up when Misr (or Fostát) was mentioned, of which it formed one of the worst quarters or rather suburbs.

277.

ذكروا النبي بكوا قال اسمعوا ايش تال

They mentioned the Prophet; the people wept.

"Hear," cried one, "what he said" (rather than weep).

278.

ذا سنيوسك ما احناش حشوه

That is a patty, (they said,) but we are not (fit to be) its stuffing.

A fine affair; but not one in which we can participate. سنيوسك is a flat meat patty sold in the bázár. احناش حشوه according to the Egyptian pronunciation for "the hashed meat and spices with which patties and other dishes are stuffed." The ئحناش is the common appendage to nouns and verbs in the Egyptian dialect.

279.

ذاك اللون اقلعه من استانك

Pull this dish out of thy teeth.

This is not made for you. اللون in the Egyptian dialect "a dish of cooked victuals."
280.

ذا زرب ما يسد ريح

That is a lattice-work that does not keep off wind.

On half-measures. زرب is a lattice-work used as sheds in gardens, or upon balconies, which are usually covered with vines or creeping plants. It is made of the برص or dry canes of the الدر،. ذا for يسد “to keep off, to stop or hinder.”

281.

ذا شغل المعلم لابنه

That is (like) the master’s work for his son.

In praise of nice and well-executed work.

282.

ذي ازنة بطارية

That is a plaster like (the plaster) of a horse doctor.

 Said of a coarse remedy applied to some evil. بطار “the horse-smith,” who, at Cairo, is likewise veterinary surgeon.

283.

ذي شي ارخص من الصك

That is a thing cheaper than a blow.

It is of a very low price. صك or منك “a blow on the neck.”
284.

ذَا جَوُعِ يُفْسَطِ ازْرَدَ

That is a hunger that breaks a cuirass.

Said of boundless avidity or greediness. يُفْسَطَ يُكْسَر ـ "to break." ازْرَدَ "a coat of mail," "a cuirass."

285.*

ذَنْبٌ الْكَلَبِ عَرْءَ ما يُسْتَقَبِم

A dog's tail never stands straight.

Said of incorrigible habits. عَرْءَ "during his whole life," is often used for ابْد "never," without any reference to life-time.

286.*

ذِبَابةٌ ما هي شَيْ وَ تَغْلِبَ الرِّيح

A fly is nothing; yet it creates loathsomeness.

The most insignificant person may prove disagreeable. تَغْلِبَ تَغْلِبَت in the Egyptian dialect "to excite disgust," "to become loathsome." تَغْلِبَ منه "he has disgusted me." Of the same sense is the term تَغْرِب.

287.

ذَلِ الْغَزِيلِ يُضَاحِكُ مِنْ نَيْهِ الْوَلَاةَ

The removal from office which is despised, laughs at the pride of government.

When we have departed from our station we begin to see what was ridiculous in it. ذَل ال "disdained, despised, mean, miserable." This is here personified together with ال عزل which is the removal from office, rank, or power. "puffed up pride."

288.

ذكر مشكل الغول و ان كان حقا
Leave off ambiguous talking, should it even be true.

289.*

ذل مَن لا سفه له
Debased is he who has no impudent defender.

"insolent, impudent." So are called in Egypt those persons whom their masters, patrons, or friends employ in fighting their quarrels or in disputing for them with their insolent behaviour and impudent language: people of this kind are easily found at Cairo. The following verse expresses the same sense:

وَمَن يعلم و ليس له سفه يلقي الاضالات من الرجال

290.

ذكرني فك يحار اهلي
Thy mouth put me in mind of the jackass at home (or of my family).

On a person appearing well at first, but proving a worthless object on nearer view. A young man followed a woman in the street thinking her pretty;
when she led him to a remote corner and lifted up her veil, he discovered her ugliness, and exclaimed in those words.

291.

ذهبت الناس و بقي النسناس

The people went away; the baboons remained.

نسناس is a species of the monkey tribe, I believe a baboon. بقي in the Egyptian dialect is seldom conjugated; it ought here to be بقيت

292.

راحت السكرة و جاءت الفكره

Drunkenness departed and reflection came.

293.

رزق الكلاب على المجانين

Dogs are left to be provided for by fools.

The extravagant fool throws away his money upon those who little deserve it. رزق here means “the lot,” or “whatever is assigned by destiny.” In this sense it is often employed, and we find it so in the
ARABIC PROVERBS.

Korán. To this sentence we might here suppose prefixed  جعل الله. In Syria the term رزق is often used to express “merchandise,” which in Egypt is called بضاعة.

294.

رزقت القردة وردة

A rose fell to the lot of a monkey.

Said of persons little deserving their good luck.

295.

رأيتك حاج و الناس راجعين

I saw thee go on the pilgrimage at the same time that the people returned from it.

On tardiness.

296.

راح يتوقد غرق

He went to make his ablutions in a pond and was drowned.

He expected some advantage, but instead of it met with total ruin.

297.

رحم الله امه كانت اقود من ابود

God bless his mother; she was more profligate than his father.

Reviling language. اتود (see Dictionary). The meaning of رحم الله is literally “God have mercy;” but in vulgar use the phrase corresponds rather with the English “God bless him!”

298.

رزق غدا لغدا

The provision for to-morrow belongs to the morrow.

Do not trouble thyself about futurity.

299.

رَدْوا لَنا مَغْطَفْنَا مَا نَرِيدَ عَنْب

Give us back our basket, we do not wish for any grapes (therein).

Pay what thou owest us only, we want no profit from it. مَغْطَفْ a basket made of date-leaves, in which the servants bring fruits and vegetables from the market.

300.

رَمَيَةٌ مِنْ غَيْرِ رَامِيٍ

A throw without a thrower.

This is said in excuse of a loose word inadvertently dropped and giving offence to another person.

301.

رَاحَ مِنِي بِشَأْمِ كَلَاه

He went away from me together with the gut of the kidneys.

Used to express that the person left me and took away even the smallest trifle of what was due to him; so that he has no further demands on me. When a sheep is killed by a private person some of the bystanders often take away the kidneys, or at least the fat that incloses them, as due to the public from him who slaughters the sheep. كلائه is the Egyptian plural of كلية “kidney.”

302.

روح احمض ما عندك اطخبه

Go, (and) the most sour thou hast, cook it.

An answer to one who excuses himself on pretence of the bad state of his larder for not being able to entertain a guest. In the vulgar Egyptian dialect روح is the imperative instead of روح.

303.

رحم الله من زار و خفف

God bless him who pays visits, and short visits.

The visits in the East, and chiefly those paid by women to each other, sometimes last a whole day; and even the visits of men are usually prolonged to a most unreasonable length. خفف “to lighten,” “cause to be less heavy,” and here “to shorten.”

304.

راح يخطب اتزوجه

He went to woo (her for a friend) and married her himself.

On an agent taking possession of the profits that he was employed to earn for his principal.

305.*

رحيم الله امرأ عزف قدره و كفي الناس شره

Blessed be the man who knows his power and abstains from doing evil to others.

306.

رأسه في القبلي و استه في التخرابة

His head turned towards the Kebly, his hinder parts among ruins.

On the hypocrisy of devotees, who seem attentive to their religious duties while they are occupied in base worldly affairs.

307.*

رأس في السما و است في الماء

The head in the heavens, the hinder parts in water.

On pride assumed by low people.

308.

ركوب التخانس ولا المشي علي الطنانس

Riding (though) upon a beetle, rather than walking upon carpets.

Persons of high rank in Egypt hold walking in great horror; and after they have passed the years of childhood, are rarely seen on foot beyond the thresholds of their own houses. طناءس is the plural of طنسة "a carpet:" it is more usually called سجادة in Egypt.

309.

رَمَيَ النَّفْس وَ ابْنِ الفَاسِ
The two parties (who had been) contending agreed (to it), but the kadhy refused his consent.

Said when the arbitrator, from an interested motive, endeavours to prolong the quarrel.

310.

رَبِّي في نفس
(Like) wind in a cage.

Said of frivolous nonsensical actions and of measures that cannot have any effect. نفس a cage made of loosely interwoven palm-leaves.

311.*

رَبّ صَباة غَرَسَت من حَلَة
Sometimes love has been implanted by one glance alone.

312.*

رَبّ حرب شَبَت من لَفَة
(The fire of) more than one war has been enkindled by a single word.
313.

ربما شَرَقَ هارب اما قبل ره

Perhaps the drinker of water is nearly choked by it, and spits it out before his thirst be quenched.

We must sometimes abandon a business which seemed profitable at first, but proves ruinous before the conclusion of it. شَرَقُ in the Egyptian dialect, signifies the gurgling noise made in the throat by spitting out water that nearly chokes one. In the same dialect ره signifies "perhaps," or "it may sometimes happen;" the more common meaning is "perhaps."

314.

زواج الصرتين قفا بين درتين

The husband of two parrots (is like) a neck between two sticks (that strike it).

On the misfortunes of a man married to two quarrelsome and garrulous women.

315.

زينق ضيق و الحمار رقاص

A narrow lane, and the ass (upon which one rides) is kicking.

Said of those who cause additional difficulties in an intricate business, instead of carrying us through it. يرقص is the common term expressing the kicking of beasts.

316.

زيجي يكذب عليّ و انا اكذب علي الخيران

My husband tells lies to me, and I tell lies to the neighbours.

I do according to what I learn.

317.*

زيجي ما غار فتّش عليّ عشيقي بشعة

My husband was not jealous, (although) my lover came to search for me with a candle.

On the blindness of cuckolds.

318.*

زوج الفاحشه قواد بشهادته

The husband of the harlot is a base wretch by his own testimony.

319.

زيج و معيط و نظام الجيظ

Zayt and Mayt, and jumping over the wall.

This is said of a man fond of company and noisy. Zayt and Mayt are words without any literal meaning, expressing merely the noise of a busy crowd. (See Proverb No. 146.) 320.

زامم الالح ما يطرب

The fifer of his (own) camp does not rejoice.

The talents of a person are less admired at home than abroad.

321.

زيها في دنيعنا

Our oil is (mixed) with our (own) flour.

Said when a person marries his own near relation. Oil-cakes are a favourite dish with the lower classes in Egypt; the oil used is lamp-oil (زيت حار).

322.

زاد في الكنصر نغمه

He added singing to the drum.

Said when either good or bad fortune receives an addition. طنور the small drum or tambourine which is held in one hand and beaten with the other, and is the constant companion of the women, especially of the lower classes, in their gay moments.

323.

آزحلق العمار و كان من شهرة العمار

The ass slipped (and fell); this (proceeded) from the ass driver's desire (to see a lady).

The affair was spoiled because the person entrusted with the management of it yielded to the impulse of his own passion or interest. A lady rode upon an ass, which the driver caused to stumble and fall, that he might obtain a sight of the fair one.

“to slip, slide, stumble, fall,” &c.

324.

I asked him about his father. "My uncle's name is Shayb," he replied.

Applied to those giving an answer not suited to the question. حلال is the mother's brother; عم the father's brother.

325.

They entrusted the keys of the pigeon-house to the cat.

برج in Egypt is the name given to the pigeon-houses, which in the open country are built in the shape of small towers, upon a plan much resembling that of the propylæa of the ancient temples.
326.

"They have called thee Rádjeh. "If God please," they said, "(now) we shall come to the just (measure)."

Thy reputation and outward appearance promise much. Rádjeh is frequently used as a man’s name; it also in the Egyptian dialect signifies “to increase the weight of the lighter scale until it equal the other.” The ‘truth’ is not only “truth,” but also “just,” and “one’s own due.”

327.

One hour for thy heart, and one hour for thy Lord.

Divide thy time between heavenly and worldly concerns.

328.

A lean little thing of a lady; and (moreover) in childbed.

She was miserable enough, and still became more miserable (by the labours of childbed). “..” is used in the Egyptian dialect for ".." and is a common expression to denote a person or thing of utter insignificance, poor, thin, miserable. The ‘state of a woman’ is the state of a woman for fifty days after the birth of her child, during which time the Moslim law regards her as impure.

329.
سوق الفسوق قائم
The market of debauch is always open.
قائم "erect;" if said of the market, it means "open."

330.
سَكَّ بينعة ما علي القفا منه مصرة
A blow that is profitable does not hurt the neck.

331.*
صلاح حاضر و عاقل غابب
Arms ready and good sense absent.
On a passionate man ready to vent his rage.

332.*
سابق التاحب بمرحلة
He is proceeding to the pilgrimage by a day’s journey.
Said of the hasty.

333.
سوسوا السفول بالختافة
Govern the rabble by opposing them.

يسوسو — ساسا سوسوا
The substantive is سياسة which means the government or administration of the executive power, in opposition to that of the judicial body or حكم الشرع
In the Egyptian dialect سياسة has also another sense, and means "to talk gently to a person," "to coax or wheedle him." سياسته means then, "I have talked gently with him, enticed him by soft words." The grooms in Egypt are called سياس (singular سياس) because they treat (or ought to treat) the horse gently. The proverb means, that low people can only be governed by acting in direct opposition to their inclinations.

334.
سلطان غشوم خير من فتنه تدوم

A tyrannical sultan is better than constant broils (or anarchy).

335.
سمع الغنا برام حاد

The hearing of music is a poignant pain.

This is said in ridicule of misers, who are reproached for their contempt of music and songs; in proof of which the following saying is attributed to them:

الإنسان يسمع فيطرب
فينغت فنغت نغتم فيموت

The person listens (to music), he rejoices in it, spends money (on the songstress); then comes reflection, he grieves and dies.

پرام a Persian word, meaning the pain of any disease; it is naturalized in Egypt among the physicians, and signifies a violent pain, or distemper in the brain.

336.
سارَتْ بِالرَّكَابِ

The riders have carried it with them (on their journey).

Said of a piece of news so publicly known, that even the Bedouin travellers heard it, and reported it in every place on their way. رَكَابُ is a party of Bedouins mounted on horses or camels.

337.
الاسْقِصَا فَرَثَةٌ

Inquiries become (or lead to) separation.

Too much inquisitiveness or curiosity about the affairs of another may cause a disagreement and separation.

338.*
السُّلَّتَانُ يَعْلَمُ وَلَا يُعَلَّمُ

The sultán teaches, and is not to be taught.

339.*
اسْجُدْ لَفَرْدَ السُّوَّاحِ فِي زَمَانِهِ

Prostrate thyself before the wicked monkey in his time (of power).
340.

السنور الصياح لا يصطاد شيء.

The cat that is (always) crying catches nothing.

To be successful in taking game one must proceed with secrecy and caution.

341.

شي ما طبخنا جانا دي الحمر من اين.

We have nothing cooked; whence came this fiery coal?

On unforeseen and undeserved mishaps. حمر is the usual term for lighted coal. بَصَة is employed also in the same sense.

342.

شي ما اكلنا نشرب علي ايش.

We have eaten nothing; why should we drink?

We have not done anything to render necessary the action in question. It is usual among people in the East to drink only after eating, so that being thirsty they may the more enjoy the draught. ايش is put here for لايش or لايَشي as the prepositions علي and الي are in general used indiscrimi-nately. Thus, "why, or for what dost thou beat me?"

343.

They prepared me; they girded me; but I have not strength for war.

Notwithstanding every assistance the person is unfit for his business.

344.

It resembles the thing that is attracted towards it.

This saying, which sounds better in Arabic than in my translation, is frequently quoted, to say that a person frequents those people only whose characters agree with his own. The construction is 345.

They praised the cat; she (then went and) dirted in the meal-box.

Said of those who become insolent and overbearing in consequence of praise.
346.

She took it off from the beard and put it into the moustaches.

The change did not better the condition.

347.

The buying of a slave; but not the training of him.

The Eastern people know well how difficult a task it is to educate a slave and break his stubborn temper.

348.

His beard became grey; his society (then) became agreeable.

349.

Of a month that does not belong to thee, do not count the days.

Do not score up the profits of others which can never become thine own. By شهر شهر or "month," is here understood the monthly pay or gain.

350.

A beggar filled his sack from another beggar.

A corruption of شهاة commonly used in Egypt for "a beggar." مخلة is the bag out of which horses and asses get their evening allowance of barley or beans. It is loosely tied to the mouth over the head, like a muzzle, and the mouth and half of the head are in the bag during the time of feeding.

351.
شروط المرافقة المرافقة
The (first) condition of friendship is to agree with each other.

352.
شيب و عيب
Greyheaded and vicious.

353.*
شبته الحساس تغلت القوار
The rejoicing of the envious rends the heart.

354.
شرارة حريق الحارة
A single spark can burn the whole quarter.
Trifles may cause universal disaster.

355.*
شي لا يشب يبوج
A thing that does not satiate, creates hunger.
356. *

Sheil bi'ak ḥti āḥṭ bi'ak la ḥiṣn ana maṣṭuqal

Take away thine, that I may put down mine, for I am in haste.

On an angry person in haste, who thinks that every one must make room for him and give way to his desires or caprices. بناعك and بناعك are expressions commonly used in Egypt for “thine” and “mine.” In the same manner متناعك and متناعك are used by the Moggrebins; and the Arabians say حقيقا and حقيقا. From the singular بناعك a plural is thus formed in the vulgar dialect, and we hear الكتب بثوئ “my horses,” الكنف بثوئ “his books,” الولد بثوئ “thy children.”

357.

Shebta aklab tawada

The dogs became satiated, and then made presents to each other (of the remaining meat).

This is applied to the generosity evinced by pāshās and other great men towards each other.

358.

Shi ṣaṭ oat, ṣi baṭ oat, ṣi akun oat

Part (of it) was burnt, part of it spoiled, and part eaten by the cats.

For money frivolously spent, such is the account given to him who had possessed it. قطاط a vulgar plural of ða The term ða is used by the gardeners; who, about Cairo, are accustomed to prick the figs of the sycamore, while yet on the tree and before they are ripe, with a pointed iron, so as to tear out of them a piece, not larger than a pea; this is done to render the fruit more sweet, for experience has shown that an increase of sweetness is the consequence of allowing the air to enter by that operation into the heart of the fruit. Figs that have not been pricked never acquire a good flavour and are called ða or spoiled. The operation itself is styled “the circumcision of sycamore figs.”

359.*

شیل یدک من المرق لا حترق

Take off thy hand from the broth lest it should be burnt.

Said to expose an insidious adviser whose object was that he might have the broth for himself. لان لا حترق In the Egyptian dialect for لان لا حترق. In similar cases the لان is often dropt in conversation.

360.

شومه و يتححال

A little old man, yet he plays the part of a gay spark.

ðا حلو حترق.ðا حترق the diminutive of حلو “to play the spark or gallant.”
ARABIC PROVERBS.

361.
A tree that affords thee shade, do not order it to be cut down.

362.
Take off thy father from thy brother.

This expression, which has no real sense in itself, has received, I know not how, a kind of meaning in the familiar language of conversation. It implies "after many difficulties," or "in short," or "to make few words," or "at last:" thus in talking of a journey they say, "we travelled, we became very tired on the road, thirst came upon us, and hunger, we had to fight—'take off thy father from thy brother'—until at last we arrived."

363.
Urine alighted upon dirt. "Welcome, my friend," he said.

This is to ridicule the dirty rascally Turkish soldiers, who when they meet salute each other in the Turkish manner with the expression مرحبًا نزدائي "Welcome, brother, or friend!" 364.
الشر قدیم

Evil is of old date.

365.

شغلي الشعر عن الشعر و البمر عن البمر

The barley engrossed my thoughts instead of the poetry, and the corn instead of liberality.

I had things quite different in my head. This saying, which is without wit, puns in the Arabic text. شغلي عنه "it engaged my leisure or attention and prevented me from adverting to the other." This is an expression much used.

366.

صارت الفرحة شاعرة

The owl has become a poetess.

Of those who undertake professions for which they are not qualified. الفرحة more commonly called ام قواطة is that species of small owl which the Syrians denominate بومة.
367.

صادفت الخمر التاليس

The asses have met with the sacks.

Misfortunes return. تاليس is the plural of تاليس. (See No. 254.)

368.

صار نقاب الغراير واعظ

He who made a hole in the corn sacks has become a preacher.

A thief turned saint. نقاب one who bores a hole, more particularly with the intention of stealing. Thus نقاب signifies one who breaks through a wall that he may steal in the house, an operation practised with incredible dexterity by the thieves of Upper Egypt. غرارة the plural of غرارة a corn bag carried by camels; it is shorter but wider than the تاليس. In the southern parts of Syria the غرارة is a corn measure.

369.

ساهم سنة ونظر علي بصلة

He fasted for a whole year, and then broke his fast with an onion.

We sometimes find persons of good repute who forfeit their character upon some trifling occasion, or to obtain some small advantage. When the Ramadhan is over the Moslims break their fast on the morning of the great feast (يغطروا) with some dainty morsels from their kitchens. It is thought meritorious on that occasion to eat first a few dates, after the example of Mohammed, and it would be shameful to use so mean a thing as an onion. The term يغطر is applied to the legal breaking of the fast, as also to the illegal breaking of it during the course of the month of Ramadhan; and it is thus said of a person هو فاطر or “he is breakfasting,” when he eats in secret, which thus becomes a very opprobrious expression.

370.
صغار تقوم كبار اخرين
The little among (certain) people are great among other people.

371.*
صلحت عويشة لعبد الكريم
The little Ayshe well suited Abd el Kerym.

On the meeting of two persons who suit each other. دل in the Egyptian dialect means “it fits or suits me,” “it is of use to me,” or “proper for me.” عويشة is the diminutive of عشة

372.
صباح الغوال ولا صباح العطبار
The morning salutation to the bean-seller, and not to the druggist.

Rather be poor but healthy like a peasant, than rich but require the apothecary's medicines. The word صباح is here put for صباحة "the first meeting or saluting on going out in the morning." According to popular belief in the East, the good or bad luck of the day is influenced by the object first seen on coming out of the door in the morning. Thus it is said if a lucky object present itself at early hours، صباحنا طيب: "our morning salute is fortunate or good." فل from the man who early in the day sells coarse horse-beans (called when boiled مدمس in the bazar; they form the principal breakfast of the lower classes; but it requires the stomach of a peasant to digest them—they are mixed with butter or lamp-oil. The druggists are at the same time the common physicians of the town.

373.

إمام النيس اللم و بل شوارب

The goat met the water and wetted his whiskers.

On a person immoderately enjoying the good luck that had happened to him.

374.

صاحب القليل اولي به

Who possesses little has the first right to it.

375.

صاحب كرغاني جزار قال جا الخرا لباب الدار

A seller of dogs-meat became the son-in-law of a butcher. "(There,)" they said, "the dirt has come to the gate of (its) house."

Said of a connection formed between two low fellows; it is usual to abridge this proverb and only quote the latter phrase, The person is called who sells the or stomach of a sheep, together with tripe or entrails and all other kinds of dogs-meat; which, however, in the East, seldom falls to the lot of dogs, but is purchased by poor people.

376.
صلح جبته و نفَّشت لحيته

He has smoothed his cloak and cleaned his beard.

He prepared himself for the business. صلَح when used on the subject of cloth, means "to pass a hot iron over it to restore its lustre;" if spoken of paper, it means "to glaze it." جبَة is the under vest of cloth as worn in the East. نفَش in the Egyptian dialect "to cleanse the beard from dust;" the word صرح is used in the same sense.

377.
صورة المؤدة الصدق

The image of friendship is truth.

It is to be wished that the Egyptians would take this maxim as their guide. Truth in friendship does not occur in the East; I can at least conscientiously declare that neither in Syria nor in Egypt did any instance of its appearing under difficult circumstances ever come within my observation: but on the contrary, numerous cases where those who called themselves friends, betrayed each other on the slightest prospect of gain, or through fear, or some other base motive.

378.
صاحب الحاجة اعي
Who wants a thing is blind (to its faults).

In the Egyptian dialect صاحب الحاجة means "he who wants the thing," "who asks it," or also "he who possesses the thing." In the first sense stands for الحاجة—and the word صاحب الحاجة means then the same as طالب الحاجة (See No. 34.)

379.
کام اليهودي لحما رخيص ن قال هذا منه
A Jew found meat at a low price. "It stinks," he then said.

On the excuses offered by a miser.

380.*
صفعة بنقد خير من بدلة بنية
A ready blow with cash is better than eighty thousand derhems of promised future payments.

بدرة is equal to "eighty thousand derhems," a term not used at present in keeping accounts. نسية in the Egyptian dialect equivalent to وعد اجل or 381.
ضرائ الابل ول تسبيع اسمك
Rather (hear) the flatulencies of the camels, than the prayers of the fishes.

The most fatiguing journey by land is preferable to the pleasantest sea voyage. "Take thy passage by sea," said a person to his friend, "thou wilt see many fishes about the ship performing their devotions." "No," replied the friend, "I think it better to hear," &c. The Egyptians dislike sea voyages so much that most of them choose the tedious and fatiguing journey by land to Mekka, rather than the shorter passage by sea. تسبيع is the prayer سببان الله and in general any homage paid to the divinity.

382.
ضرتين في الرأس توجع
Two blows on the head cause pain.

Said of a person who has been twice cheated in the same manner.
383.

They laughed with the water-carrier, he thought it to be true.

On the credulity with which inferiors listen to the joking promises of their superiors.  ضحكوا علي السقا حسبوا من حقا usually means "they laughed at him;" but sometimes, as here, "they laughed with him," or "joked with him." the Egyptian pronunciation of having the last syllables very strongly accented, thus "hasabœe."

384.

The guest of the hospitable treats hospitably.

Or he learns hospitality from those who have evinced it towards him. This alludes to a custom general in the East; a man invited by any respectable person to an entertainment may bring with him several of his own friends without the desire or permission of the host; who, nevertheless, treats them with as much politeness as those whom he had himself particularly invited.

385.

He beat me and cried out; he got the start of me and complained.

Said of those who complain in the midst of their successes.
386.
ضيف البدوي يسرق ثيابك

Entertain the Bedouin, he will steal thy clothes.

On ingratitude. The Bedouins of Egypt have the worst reputation amongst the townspeople; and many of them, reduced to a mongrel race between free Bedouins and peasants, have adopted all the vices of the latter. ضيف is the Egyptian imperative of 'to treat as a guest," "to entertain."

387.
ضرب الحبيب مثل اكل زبيب

A blow from our lover is as (sweet as) the eating of raisins.

Here the wit lies merely in the Arabic rhyme of zebyb, raisin, with habyb, lover.

388.
ضارني ولا تمسك خصاي

Fight with me, but do not lay hold of such a part as may be seriously injured.

Observe some decency and moderation in thy enmity. When the Egyptian peasants fight with each other it frequently happens that the weaker seizes his adversary in such a manner as to cause dangerous or fatal results.
389.

His understanding is lost in his length.

Said of a person as tall in stature as he is stupid in mind.

390.

Like the laughter of the nut (when cracked) between two stones.

Said of smiles or laughter forced amidst poignant sufferings.

391.

Put the things into their places, they will put thee into thy place.

Give to every one his due and right, and thou shalt have thy due. This saying also means, “make no innovations, and thou shalt not be disturbed.”

392.

Strike the innocent, that the guilty may confess.

What a judicial maxim! It is related that in an intricate law suit, the kadhy caused a person avowedly innocent to be bastinadoed. When the poor man complained, the kadhy declared that he beat him merely with the hope that whoever was the real culprit might be induced to confess out of compassion.

393.

ضحك الاناعي في جراب النورة

(Like) the laughter of serpents in the sack of burning chalk.

This in purport is similar to No. 390. To torment serpents the children put them into a sack of unslaked lime, and then pour water on it; the hisses of the serpents while they suffer the torture of burning, are called by the children "the laughing of the serpents." نورة is unextinguished lime; the same name is also given to a paste made of this lime and mercury, which is used in the bath as a depilatory to remove hairs from the body. جراب is a "leather bag."

394.

ضيق الحوصلة

(He is) of narrow throat.

This is said of a person who blabs every secret. حوصلة in Egypt signifies that part of a bird's throat wherein the food is deposited before digestion.

395.*

اضبط من الإغري

(He) holds faster than the blind man.

Said of one who never relaxes his hold. Blind men grasp at the objects before them with peculiar force and eagerness.
396.

ناري من سلم التخيفاط

Narrower than the ear of a needle.

Applied to business of a difficult nature. سلم التخيفاط is an expression meaning the “ear of a needle.” We find in the Koran حتي يلتهج التجمل في سلم التخيفاط “until the camel shall enter into the needle’s ear.”

397.

طار طيرك وأخذته غيرك

Thy bird flew away, and another took it.

Another has seized upon thy good luck, or of the opportunity that thou hast missed.

398.*

طرطور يقع من لصمة

(Like) a high cap, it falls off at a single blow.

This is said of an effeminate cowardly person ططور ططور (See No. 194.) In the Egyptian dialect لصمة signifies a blow not very violent.
399.

Beat thy drum and blow thy pipe.

Thou hast obtained thy wishes, now rejoice, this is the time for mirth. The Egyptians frequently quote this saying. The drum and the pipe are instruments much used, especially among the peasants.

400.

He caused his bird to fly away, and then went running after it.

On inconsistency of conduct.

401.

The hole (which he made) opened into a granary.

Said of the failure of a person's eager endeavours. A thief contrived to make a hole in a wall, expecting to find a room full of valuable goods on the other side; but instead of it he found a magazine of straw or corn that was of little service to him. The hole made in the wall is an open yard where the corn or straw belonging to government is kept. In every town of Egypt there is such a yard, where the corn is heaped up, but uncovered and exposed to min; which, however, only spoils the surface to the depth of six or eight inches. As far as I know, there exists at present in Egypt but one roofed magazine of corn: this was lately erected at Alexandria by Mohammed Aly Páshá.

402.

طالب المال بلا مال كحامل الماء في الغرال

Who seeks for wealth without (previous) wealth is like him who carries water in a sieve.

403.*

طاعة اللسان ندامة

Obedience to the tongue (causes) repentance.

Who leaves his tongue uncontrolled, repents.

404.

طيب يداوي الناس وهو عليل

(Like) a physician curing the people, while he himself is distempered.

(A verse.)

405.

طعام السد يخيم الذيب

The food of the lion (causes) indigestion to the wolf.

فخمة surfeit, indigestion.

406.

الطمع الكاذب يدق الذببة

False ambition severs the neck.

It leads to perdition. طمع means “avidity,” whether for pecuniary gain, or for power, or fame, in which latter sense it means "ambition." in the Egyptian dialect, "to strike," "to cut off," &c.

407.
ظلم الہایم حرام

The ill-treatment of brute creatures is unlawful.

408.
ظلم خوان بعيد الإحسان

Suspicious, treacherous, remote from good works.

Striking characteristics of a worthless person. ظنائ who thinks ill of others, because it is understood 409.

ظلم غشوم كعب الشوام

Tyrannical, cheating, of bad omen.

means that his heel (and therefore the whole person) is of bad omen: it stands for كعب السوام The Egyptians say concerning a thing which is of bad omen to its possessor كعب عليه موش طيب "his heel is not good for it," or "his heel in passing over it will be unlucky.” (مَوِش) With respect to bad omens the Egyptians say “thresholds, heels, and the horses' forelocks;” meaning that houses, men, and horses, are most exposed to the evil eye and bad omens. This is probably derived from the saying of Mohammed, ان يكون الشَمْ فِي ثَلَاث أَلَامَة وَالْمَرَّة وَالْعُدَاب “Let the bad omen reside only in three things; the house, the woman, and the animal.” The ancient Arabs were extremely superstitious on this subject; and even now the fear of a bad omen is universal, and pervades every transaction.

410.
عين لا ترى تلب لا يحزن
(When) the eye does not see, the heart does not grieve.
Be not an eye-witness of misfortunes.

411.
علي قد الكسا مد رجليك
In proportion to the (length of) thy garment stretch out thy legs.
Accommodate thyself to the circumstances in which thou art placed. To stretch out one's leg beyond the cloak, so that any part of it should appear, is reckoned highly indecent and unmannerly among respectable persons in Eastern society. Before a superior the man who sits cross-legged must endeavour to hide even his feet and toes, in fact he must show no part of his body but the face. In the Egyptian dialect ند is often used for قدر 412.

عذوني غاسلتي

My enemy is the washer of my corpse.

I am thrown upon the mercy of my enemy. الغاسلة is the woman who washes the corpses of females previously to interment.

413.

غزيان باسته و التخور تحته

Naked about his hinder parts, and perfume under them.

Although he has not money wherewith to purchase drawers, yet he has the vanity to perfume his hinder parts; while even the rich are content to perfume their beards. The vanity of living beyond one's station, and affecting airs of greatness, is very common among the Easterns of a low class; while on the contrary, those of the higher classes endeavour to conceal their wealth by living as poorly as is compatible with their rank.
414.

Wise men do not quarrel with each other.

415.

The enmity of the wise, rather than the friendship of the fool.

416.

At the ford over the river the kalyt becomes conspicuous.

On certain occasions the bad qualities of a person must show themselves. is a fording place where the water is shallow. The peasants in crossing over hold up their loose skirts, and on such occasions the kalyt (see No. 157,) becomes conspicuous.

417.

At the roasted meat “take, take;” but at the vinegar “my teeth ache.”

He eagerly eats the roasted meat; but when vinegar is offered he says, “it makes my teeth ache.” لف “to encircle, to cover, or wrap up.” Here it means to wrap up the pieces of roast meat in some bread as is practised at dinners in the East, where every morsel taken from the dish is accompanied to the mouth with a piece of bread; or, if possible, wrapped up in it. صرفان is that unpleasant sensation of the teeth when we see anything repugnant to our nature or taste. Vinegar made of dates is used by the lower classes in summer; they dip their bread into it.

418.

عند البطن تذهب العقول

When the stomach is concerned, wisdom withdraws.

Wisdom is overpowered by hunger or dire necessity.

419.

عند المضيق لا أخ ولا مديق

At the narrow passage there is no brother and no friend.

In dangerous cases we must only think of saving ourselves. المضيق "a narrow pass," "a difficult moment."

420.

عيا تخفف ماجنة

A blind woman shaves an insane one.

On improper persons employed in ridiculous affairs. تخفيف "the rubbing the skin of the face with the "libán shámy as a depilatory to remove hairs. The "libán shámy (لبان شامي) is a white shining gum of a glutinous quality, a kind of turpentine that is imported into Egypt from the islands of the Archipelago, particularly from Scio, where it is produced from a species of fir. It is used in a melted state, the finger being dipped into it and rubbed over the face, by which process all the hair to which it sticks is eradicated. The women of Cairo whose beauty is obscured by hair on the skin, avail themselves of this 421.

علي عينك يا تاجر

To thy eye, O Merchant.

The whole is displayed before thee, therefore open thy eyes, for if thou art cheated in the business, it is now thy own fault.

422.
علي بحق زفافى قصر الليل و تابت المغني

To the good luck of my wedding festivities the night was short, and the female singers became penitents.

This is said ironically to express that the wedding did not succeed well; and the saying is applied to any unfortunate circumstance that throws obstacles in the way of rejoicings. زناى is the plural of زنًى; “the procession in which the bride is carried to the house of her spouse;” and it also signifies “the whole wedding-feast,” the principal rejoicings of which take place during the night; and at Cairo always on the night preceding the consummation of matrimony, which last night is called ليلة الدخيلة While I am writing this, the whole quarter of the city in which I reside is illuminated on a similar occasion; and two men, one disguised as a French soldier, the other dressed up as a French woman, play their tricks before a large assembly of Arabs, in front of the bridegroom’s house; a third Arab personifies a cowardly Turkish soldier making love to the lady; he, as well as the French pair, pronounce Arabic according to their supposed native idioms, a circumstance which causes roars of laughter. The mock-lady’s heart is won by the Turkish soldier, whose pockets are full of gold; but the French soldier beats the Turk unmercifully whenever he meets him, and at last obliges him to put on his hat instead of the turban. The female singers are mostly public women of a loose description; those who were expected at the wedding feast suddenly felt symptoms of repentance (تائب), and therefore did not attend.

As certain customs usual on a Moslim wedding ceremony at Cairo have not been mentioned by former travellers, I shall here give some account of them. When a girl is to be asked in matrimony, a friend or relation, or the sheikh of the young man, (who has instructed him in reading the Korán,) goes to the girl’s father, and makes a bargain for her. It is a real bargain, for the girl’s affections are never consulted, and the amount of the price to be paid for her (حتى البنت as they call it,) is the only matter taken into consideration, provided the stations in life of both parties sufficiently correspond; but even in this respect the Egyptians are not very scrupulous, and a man of low extraction and profession who possesses wealth often marries into a high class. The price paid for the girl to her father, or, if he be dead, to the nearest male relation, varies according to her rank, fortune, or reputation for beauty. Among the first-rate merchants the price is from two hundred to three hundred dollars; among those of the second class, from sixty to eighty; and the lower classes often pay no more than from three to five dollars. It is usual to pay half of the money immediately in advance, this sum becomes the property of the father; the other half remains in the bridegroom’s hands, and reverts to his wife if he should die or divorce her; but if she herself sues for a divorce she forfeits her claim to the money. On the day of betrothing (يوم الخطبة) the girl’s father gives a small entertainment in his house, where none assemble but intimate friends, the bridegroom himself not being present. The day for the marriage is then fixed. If any festivity is to take place (a circumstance with which the poorer classes generally dispense), the street wherein the bridegroom resides is for six or seven days before the marriage decorated with flags and various-coloured lamps, suspended from cords drawn across the street. Three days before the marriage ceremony the festivities usually begin; if the parties are great and rich people, they begin eight days before—the house is then full of company every night, and an open table is kept. But on the great night of the feast (that immediately preceding the nuptial night,) singing and dancing women are hired to attend, and the whole street is illuminated. Next morning when the nuptials are to take place (يوم الدّخة), (which in Egypt is always on Monday or Thursday, the other days being considered of bad omen with regard to weddings,) the girl’s father repairs to the bridegroom’s house; accompanied by some of his friends, in order to conclude the marriage compact (عقد); after a plentiful dinner the mutual friends assemble in a circle, the girl’s father and the bridegroom sitting in the midst. The former takes the other’s hand, and after the recital of a short prayer addresses him in these words: “I give to thee my daughter N * * *, the adult virgin, in marriage according to the law of God and of his prophet.” (زوجتك بنتي فولاة البكرة البالغة بسنتها الله و رسوله عليه السلام) To which the other replies: “I take thy daughter N * * * in marriage, the adult virgin, according to the law of God and of his prophet.” The father asks, “Dost thou accept my daughter?” (اتبعت بنتي) The answer is, “I have accepted her.” (نلتها) The father immediately adds, “God bless thee with her.” (الله يبارك لك فيها) And the bridegroom replies, “I hope in God that she may prove a blessing.” (مارك ان شاء الله) The Fatha (or first chapter of the Koran) is then recited by the whole company, and all present shake hands with the bridegroom, and congratulate him. No document or marriage contract is written on this occasion, nor even at the time of betrothing, when two witnesses only are required, to attest verbally the betrothing and the payment of the money. While this ceremony is taking place, the bride, having left her own house, and accompanied by all her female relations, proceeds through the town in a manner faithfully represented in a plate of Niebuhr's Travels. She is completely veiled, generally with a Cashmere shawl; a large canopy of red silk or cotton stuff, held by four men, is carried over her head; the musicians go before her. She parades through all the principal streets from morning till evening, for six or eight hours.* When great people marry, these processions are conducted upon a more magnificent scale. I have seen many nuptial processions of persons high in office at the court of Mohammed Aly; the bride was seated in a carriage, and all the different trades and professions of the town appeared personified upon richly decorated open waggons drawn by horses; in these waggons the tradesmen and artists had established their shops, and sat working in the same manner as in their own regular abodes: sixty or seventy of those waggons followed the carriage of the bride. Before them went rope-dancers, harlequins, &c., and at their head was a masqued figure that is frequently seen parading in front of nuptial processions of an inferior order, and conducted with much less pomp and splendour; this figure is a young man whose head, arms, legs, and entire body are patched over

* In Syria, where this procession is accompanied with other ceremonies and usually takes place in the early part of the night, it is reckoned a very bad omen to pass with the bride before a public bath, and therefore those streets are carefully avoided into which the baths open.
with white cotton, so that no part of the skin can be perceived, his person appearing as if completely powdered over. He exhibits, in the natural position, that object which constituted the distinguishing attribute of the ancient Roman god of the gardens; this is of enormous proportion, two feet in length, and covered with cotton; and he displays it with indecent gesticulation in all the bázârs before the staring multitude, and during the whole time of the procession. How this custom, which is not known in other places, began among the Egyptians, I am unable to ascertain; but it seems not improbably some remnant of the worship paid by their forefathers to that god, whose temple at Karnak is the most considerable now existing in Egypt. Towards evening the bride arrives, half fainting from fatigue, before the gate of her spouse's dwelling, from which he issues, suddenly clasps her in his arms as if by violence, and running off with his fair prize carries her into the female's apartments up stairs, where all the women of both families are assembled. This evening is past with much fewer festivities than the last; there are not any public rejoicings in the streets, and none but the relations and intimate friends attend at supper. The bridegroom now in his turn leaves the house, he parades in his newest clothes, by the light of torches and to the sound of drums, a short way through the town, accompanied by his friends; he then goes to the Mosque, and recites the Āeshe, or last evening prayer, after which he returns to his home. As soon as he enters the house his friends leave him, but at parting strike him many times with their hands upon his back; these blows he endeavours to avoid by running in as fast as possible. He is indulged with a short repose in his own apartment, and a message is then sent informing him that his bride is ready to receive him. He finds her in his bedchamber, sitting upon the sofa with two women by her side, usually the mother or aunt, and the old midwife of her family. It is here that for the first time her face is seen by the bridegroom, and his expectations are but too often disappointed. At his entrance the veil that covers her is removed by her attendants; she then rises and kisses his hands. An invariable and indispensable custom now obliges the bridegroom to give money to both the female attendants, and likewise to put some money into the hands of his bride, this is called "the price for the uncovering of the face" (حتى كشف الوجه). If his circumstances allow him, he generally gives gold coins: if he is poor, he gives a piastre, or even a few paras; something, however, must be given, although a trifling sum, in testimony of the veil having been removed with the girl's consent. The two women then retire, and none remain but the bride and bridegroom. During this first nuptial "tête à tête" many women assemble before the door, striking drums, singing, and shouting loudly, to prevent from being heard any conversation that might pass between the newly married couple. On this occasion the bridegroom must convince himself that no man has anticipated him in the possession of the fair one, whom also he must no longer allow to boast of being a maiden (انه يحيطها). The mode in which he acquires that conviction is sometimes so repugnant to manly feelings, that I must describe it in a language better adapted than the English to a detail of similar proceedings. انها كسيرين من الناس تستغني في ذلك الوقت عن وظيفة البنت فيخترقها باصبعهم و العامة يستعملوا أيضا مفتاح خشب حتي الفلاحين و الناس السفلا لا يخترقوا البنت الا بالفتاح بل يعيبوا كل الذين ما يفعلوا كذلك Before the bridegroom approaches his bride it is reckoned proper that he should utter aloud these words of the Koran: نصر من الله و فتح قريب Among the lower classes of Moslems at Cairo it is customary that on the day after the nuptials certain female relations of the bride should carry her innermost garment (not her handkerchief as some travellers have related,) in triumph to the houses of their neighbours. But this practise is not adopted by the more respectable inhabitants, among whom the chemise is exhibited only in the bridegroom’s house to the women assembled there; and in many instances the people of high rank condemn even this exhibition as indecent, and no longer allow it. On that night, immediately after the conclusion of their first interview, the bride and bridegroom retire to separate apartments; next morning they go to the bath; and for seven days after some female relations constantly remain with the bride in the house of her husband, but he is not permitted to approach her,
The bride furnishes herself with clothes for the marriage, and with ornaments; she brings likewise to her husband's house much furniture, bedding, kitchen utensils, &c. (called فراش) often of greater value than the price which was paid for her; those articles continue her property.

If a widow marries, none of those ceremonies take place; the nuptials are celebrated in a quiet manner by the family alone. Even the marriage of a virgin is sometimes not accompanied by any festivities, but for this omission an express stipulation must be made at the time of betrothing; else the bride and her friends would consider themselves insulted.

It is always expected that those who are invited to nuptials should bring some presents; sugar, coffee, and wax candles, are the articles generally sent on such occasions to the bridegroom's house, upon a large board covered with a fine handkerchief.

Divorces are extremely common at Cairo; I believe there are few individuals who have not divorced one wife. Polygamy is much less frequent than Europeans imagine. Of one hundred married men in this city there certainly is not more than one who has two wives; and not more than one in five hundred who has more than two. The privilege of having four, which the Moslim law allows, is enjoyed by the richest class only, those who can afford to keep separate establishments.

To estimate the condition of the Arab women at Cairo, by that reported to exist at Constantinople and in the large Turkish towns, would be very erroneous. Females probably enjoy more freedom here at Cairo than in any other part of the Turkish empire, the deserts excepted; and whether for that reason, or from some accessory causes, they are of less reserved manners, and more addicted to debauchery than the women of the neighbouring countries, Syria and Hedjáz.

423.*

عَر الکذاب تُصير

The liar is short-lived (soon detected).

424.

علي المرء من يدنس

It is the business of the Mueddin to call to prayers.

There are appropriate persons for the performance of every business. علي sometimes means “the business of,” “belonging to.” Thus it is said، هذه علي “this is my business or duty to perform,” “this obligation devolves upon me.”

425.

عیش يا حمار حتي ينبت النوار

Live, thou ass, until the clover sprouts up.

Exhorting a foolish person to be patient and not to despond, as it is quite certain that circumstances will change for the better.
426.

علموني كيف اهتجزكم قالوا خليما و ريح

Teach me how I can depart from you. Let us alone, they said, and begone.

Said of a person fondly imagining that he is dear to people who do not care about him.

427.*

عاشر الصليي صلبي و عاشر المغليي تغني

Live with him who prays, and thou prayest; live with the singer, and thou singest.

428.*

عفاحية و نالشة و بَقِّية و حااشة

A miserable disorderly slut talks proudly and affects prudery.

عفاحية comes from the term عفش—which in the Egyptian dialect signifies "miserable baggage," "trumpery;" thus they say عفش نفتش meaning a "deal of rubbish and trumpery." The word عفش is a cant term employed only in this phrase, and without any real signification, but it serves to rhyme with عفش (See No. 146 and No. 319.) In a wider sense عفش means also "baggage in general," "parcels of goods." نالشة from the word متلاشي "thrown about," "disorderly," "worthless." بَقِّية an imitative word expressing the gurgling sound which water produces in passing through the narrow opening of earthen jars when poured out. From this is derived its figurative sense, the talking loud, and also babbling. "to abstract one's self from society," "to neglect one's friends," "to behave towards them with reserve and affected airs."

429.

عَيِّ الْقَطِ وَكَان بِقَهْرَةِ الْفَار

The cat became blind yet still was hankering after mice.

430.

عَارِةُ الْبَيْتِ وَلا خَرَابُهُ

To keep the family in good condition, not to destroy it.

When the words عَارِةُ and خَرَابُ refer to بَيْت (a house or family), عَارِةُ means "to keep the family in a good state by letting the mother live with her husband and children;" and خَرَابُ means "to ruin the family by divorcing the mother and obliging her to quit the house." خَرَابُ الْبَيْت is likewise used when the father of a family dies.

431.

عازِبٌ وَيِئِرٌبٌ مَا يَخْلُقُ لِهُ صَاحِب

Unmarried, quarrelsome, and retaining no friend.

Said of one whose manners are repulsive.
432.

عريان و في كمه ميزان

(Half) naked and a balance in his hand.

Miserable, still laying claim to the habits of the wealthy. عريان does not here properly mean “naked,” but “half-naked,” “in rags.” The substantial merchants of Cairo frequently carry a small balance in their wide sleeves, to weigh the sequins and other gold coins which they receive in payment.

433.

علمناه الشعانة سِبقنا علي الابوب

We taught him begging, and (now) he has the start of us at the gates.

The pupil excelling his master. See No. 350, for الشعانة

434.

عصيدة من طبيب علي

A pap of the cookery of Om Aly.

To express a thing prepared with great care and nicety. عصيدة is a pap made of meal, butter, and water, much used among the negroes and also among the peasants. ام علي a woman’s name; as women are often called by the name of their favourite child, usually the first-born son.
435.

عَيْبَتُ الْقُدْر عَلِيَّ الْمَغْرَة قَالَ تَأَسِّيًا يَا مَهَارَة

The kettle reproached the kitchen spoon. "Thou blackee," he said, "thou idle babbler."

Of those who reprove others for faults of which they themselves are more guilty. المَغْرَة is a large wooden kitchen spoon. يَحَارِف has not in Egypt always the literal signification, but means "to talk idly," "to give bad advice," "to delude a person by shrewd words."

436.

عِواضُ خَطْرُوك وَ الحَمْرَةِ إِمْسَحَي ُحَمَشَ يَا بَظَر٢

Instead of thy (fine) tattoo and thy painting, wipe off the dirt from thy face, thou hussey.

Do what is right and necessary before thou thinkest of what is merely ornamental. خَطْرُوك so is called the tattooing of the female peasants and those of the lower classes in general; this is produced by incisions made along the forehead and temples, disposed in separate lines, but never forming any regular figures. الحَمْرَةِ is the red colour, with which the gay women paint their hands and feet; it is made either of Henna or of Cinnabar. In the Egyptian dialect زَمَنَبِر means "dirt in the eye," (and likewise, "soreness of the eye"). بَظَر٢ is an insulting expression, equivalent to "slut or wench." It originally signifies —labia pudendorum, quae a Cahirinis etiam dicuntur, et in puellis exciduntur.
437.
مَيْلِ التَّحَبِّبِ أَبْيَضَ مِنْ عَنَاقِ الْوَلْدَاعِ
The embrace at meeting is better than that at parting.

438.
عيونه في الطبق و انده لَمْ يرى
His eye upon the cupboard, his ear towards the crier
(of things for sale in the street).

Applied to a greedy glutton. طبق is a board or shelf in a room whereon eatables, especially fruits and sweetmeats, are deposited. لَمْ يرى "to him who cries," víz., cries victuals, fruit, &c., for sale; it is here put for في من عَرَقٍ

439.
عين الشمس لم تغطي
The eye of the sun cannot be hidden.

Superior excellence or beauty will become known, notwithstanding every effort made to conceal them.
شمس and عين الشمس are often said indifferently; it also means the body of the sun, or the solar rays.
This proverb is taken from a poem in praise of wine,
beginning with the following verses:

الراح المدام الفرَقَف البَكر العَجِّاز الشمطا
غطوها الندامة قالت عين الشمس لم تغطَّي.

In the first line there are six different terms expressing wine.
440.

عير و استعير هذا هو العار الكبير

_Borrow and lend out (what thou hast borrowed), that is the great shame._

This is a verbal play on the different meanings of عار

441.

عرس و في طرحه ختان

_A wedding, and by its side a circumcision (feast)._

A surplus or superabundance of rejoicings. The term ختان is more commonly used in Egypt than طهارة
To save expense the Egyptians frequently celebrate these two festivals at the same time, when an opportunity of doing so presents itself.

442.

عين الفِلَادة و رأس التخت و أول الجريدة و نكتة المسالة و بيت القصيدة

_The jewel of the necklace, the canopy of the throne,
the vanguard of the army, the point in discourse,
the best verse of the poem._

The “eye of the necklace” (عين الفِلَادة) (عين الفِلَادة) is the precious stone, or medallion, or gold coin, which hangs upon the breast, from the middle of a woman’s necklace, to attract particular notice. جريدة or جريدنة “an army or large body of troops in actual warfare;”
thus, التجریدة على الوهابي "the army against the WAHÁBY.” اول الجريدة is the “head or vanguard of the army, composed of the bravest soldiers.” نكرة المسالة “the very point or most material part of the question under discussion.” بيت القصيدة so is styled the verse (بيت) wherein the poet has exerted his utmost powers; the main verse of the poem, usually found towards the end of those compositions called Kasíde.

443.

عصارَة لَوَم في قارِورة قَبٌث A dirty liquor in a wretched bottle.

A bad character and unseemly body. عصارَة a liquid extracted by pressure from whatever source it may be. قارِورة the same as قارِورة a “glass bottle.”

444.

عليه ما علي الطبل يوم العيد May that come upon him which comes upon the drum on the feast-day.

Much beating; verbatim, “to him what to the drum on the day of festival.”

445.

عليه ما علي المتعنصات من العذاب May those torments be his which are the due of the adulteresses.

May he suffer stoning. Here is to be understood المتعنصات or those women whom the Koran condemns to be stoned (ترجم).
May that be his lot which is the lot of the Sabbath men.

The Sabbath men, or the Jews, are doomed to hell fire by the Koran. All these imprecations are in common and frequent use.

The blind man does what is nasty upon the roof of the house, and thinks that the people do not see him.

Said of a blockhead who fancies that the world is unacquainted with his foolish tricks, however openly he practises them. The meaning of فوق السطح is properly "above the roof or terrace of the house;" but it is constantly used to express "upon the terrace."

Custom is the twin of the innate character.

(See No. 133.)

More rare than fly-brains.

Said of any thing very scarce. iew means originally (as here) "a fly"; but in the common dialect of Egypt this name is given to a sort of vermin that stick to the beards of filthy peasants, and are also called 450.

اعز من انف الامد

Scarcer than the nose of the lion.

Said of a rare thing, because it is difficult to take a lion by the nose.

451.

اعلق من ترارد

More adhesive than a tick.

Said of a person whom one cannot shake off. ترارد is a species of tike (or tick); these creatures attach themselves firmly to the body (especially to the belly) of a camel, and annoy him extremely.

452.

اعدل من الميزان

More just than a balance.

453.

العز في نواصي الخيل

 Honour (resides) in the manes of horses.

This is taken from the saying of Mohammed, the sayings معلوم بزواوي الخيل and is often quoted to show the superior distinction which a horseman claims above him who rides upon an ass.
signifies the lock of hair that falls on the horse's forehead.

454.

عذر لم يتولى الحلق نسج
It is an excuse the texture of which is not truth's own work.

Said of a false excuse. The construction is العربية لiteti الحلق نسج. In the Egyptian dialect often means "to do a thing by one's self," "by one's own labour," equivalent to ينسج or الفعل بالنفس "to weave." A more common term for weaving is كرار and a weaver is called دار in Egypt.

455.

غابت الساع و لعبت الصاع
The lions withdrew, the hyænas then played.

A verse which is frequently quoted conveys the same meaning:

و اذا خلا الميدان من اسد

And when the lion has cleared the field,

And when the lion has cleared the field,
The ferret dances and the Ichneumon sings.

or عرس is a species of small weasel or ferret very common in Egypt; it comes into the houses, feeds upon meat, is of a gentle disposition although not to be domesticated, and full of play and gambols. The is the Ichneumon rat, that has a sharp shrill voice. in the Egyptian dialect, means "to sing," "to recite a poem."

456.
غرامة بينة ولا رحم بطي

* A clear loss rather than a profit of distant expectation.*

457.
غلا و سو كيل

Scarcity and bad (corn) measuring.

Bad times and bad men.

458.
غراب قال الله حق قال بقي نباح الخرا واعظ

* A crow exclaimed "God is the truth," "then," quoth one, "the dirt scraper has become a preacher."*

is a kind of expletive often used in Egypt, sometimes meaning "there," "therefore," "altogether," or "in short;" but at other times it has not any signification whatever and is quite superfluous. (See No. 263.) "to search upon the ground," "to dig it slightly," "to scrape, or scratch it." 459.

A boy-servant of all work, without food or wages.

Said in reference to the unwillingness of a person to reward those who have served him well. "sufficient," i.e., for all the work required in the house. جرادة is the common term in Egypt for wages or monthly pay. جرادة in the Egyptian dialect signifies the daily allowance of victuals given to soldiers, labourers, servants, &c.

460.

The jealousy of the harlot (is evinced by) adultery, that of the virtuous woman (by) weeping.

461.

Anger with our friend, rather than constant friendship with our enemy.

"to be angry with," "to quarrel with." The expression "I am angry with him," is often heard.

462.

The dinner is in Upper Egypt—it is not far off.

This is said in ridicule of the parasites (طفيل) who run from one end of the town to the other for the sake of a good dinner.
463.

The jealousy of a wife is the key to her divorce.

464.

Singing without remuneration is like a dead body without perfumes.

When the singing women perform in Egypt they collect money from all the persons present, the landlord or host as well as the guests; and according to custom, one of them proclaims with a loud voice the sum which each person puts on the plate, mentioning at the same time the donor's name; this custom excites the vanity of those who form the company, each from a kind of emulation in liberality wishing to have his own name mentioned as the most generous; this heightens the interest and pleasure of the society, and fills the pockets of the singers. حنوط signifies the money given to the singers by the company. حنوط is a mixture of camphor and rose-water, with which the face of a dead person is sprinkled before the body is placed in the coffin.

465.

My debtor is still more backward in payment than I am myself.

This is said in excuse for our not paying a debt, as our own debtor does not pay us. غيرم in the Egyptian dialect means the debtor and also the creditor. nhắc is here used in the same sense as which means in Egypt one who is backward in paying, or generally remiss in doing what is his duty.

466.

غدي متخمر ولا تعشي سكري
Give dinner to the drunken—but not supper to the tipsy.

The drunken, it is supposed, will become sober in the evening; but the tipsy during supper will be intoxicated and continue so all night. متخمر or سكر “a man completely drunk.” مسكر or سكر “one who is tipsy.” رجل في النشوة “a person clouded or stupified with wine,” being the first stage of drunkenness. This expression corresponds exactly to the German “benebelt.”

467.

غضبه على وجه مناخيره
His anger is on the edge of his nose.

Ever ready to burst forth. مناخير properly signifies nostrils, but is used constantly in Egypt for nose, or انف—a term seldom heard there in familiar conversation.

468.

غاص غوصة و جا بروحة
He plunged a (deep) plunge, and came up with a piece of dung.
469.

فار ما رُسِعَ شَقَّة حَطَّوا في قَعَر مَزْيَة

A mouse feared that her hinder part was not sufficiently wide; they then introduced an iron pestle.

On remedies that cause an evil worse than that for which they are applied. قَعَر is a low word for است &c., more politely expressed by دَيْر–طَنِير. The word مَزْيَة means a thick heavy iron club held by both hands, and used by the public coffee-roasters to pound the roasted beans in large mortars.

470.

فَقَمَا وَتَشْرِب مَلْوْحْيَة

She has a distorted mouth and drinks Meloukhya.

She does a thing seldom done by others, although she is less qualified for doing so than others. فَقَمَا "with a distorted mouth." The pot-herb meloukhya is boiled with meat till it forms a thick broth, of which the Egyptians are very fond; they eat it with a spoon or dip their bread into it, but few drink the thick broth, and the woman with a distorted mouth has the least claim to do so, because she will probably spill it, being scarcely able to drink mere water without letting some fall about. The 1 at the end of ملوكها is according to the pronunciation of the lower classes of Cairo, by which a strong accent is laid upon ١ at the end of feminine nouns.

471.

فَدَان يَكَرِم بَقِصْبَة

A feddán may have a kassaba bestowed in its favour.

...A trifling thing may be sacrificed in favour of a great one. It would have been better Arabic thus:

The feddán is an Egyptian land measure, of which the extent differs according to the various departments of the revenue:

"Feddán el kamel," or "el Djerkasy," is composed of 400 square rods or kassabas, and is computed at 24 kerats; the kassaba being an imaginary portion of the division which comprises 24 kerats, and used on many occasions.

Feddán of 333\(\frac{1}{2}\) square kassabas or 20 kerats.

Feddán of 300 kassabas or 18 kerats; this is the feddán most used at present. The kassaba that composes it has 3\(\frac{44}{100}\) metres. But this kassaba, or rod, which the surveyors now use in measuring out the sown fields every year, according to the new regulations of Mohammed Ali Pasha, (who has abolished the land taxes assessed upon villages, or districts at large, and now takes throughout the country the miri from each feddán), this rod, I say, is often changed, i.e. shortened, to cheat the peasants, and every two or three years an inch is lopped off from it. The poor fellah is little aware of this diminution at the moment, but he has, however, found out that at present (in 1817) the kassaba used is only three-fourths of what it was twelve years ago under the Mamelouks, although the feddán for which they pay the tax still contains the same number of rods. The manner in which the kassaba itself is measured favours a deception of this kind. Immemorial custom has decided that it ought to consist of twenty-four fists (نفعة), meaning such as are formed in seizing a stick with the hand and keeping the thumb erect upon it, thus—

No exact measure has ever been determined, and it may be easily conceived that government does not choose the largest hands to fix the length of the rod. In 1816, the kassaba had about 6½ Cairo pikes. The peasants are so stupid, or so negligent, that perhaps they seldom discover the cheat, or think it of little moment; besides, they respect it as a custom of their forefathers. The shortening of the kassaba by an inch, probably makes an increase in the receipts of the Fiscus of from £20,000 to £30,000 sterling per annum. This is one of the numerous tricks and secret measures by which government curtails the fellah's pittance without incurring the blame of open tyrannical extortion.

According to the latest data there are about 2,000,000 of feddán now under actual cultivation in Egypt, (of which five-sixths are sown with grain). Then 2,000,000 of feddán at the rate of 3½ or 4 dollars annual tax per feddán, (as it may be now computed,) gives a land revenue of at least 7,000,000 of dollars to the Pasha of Egypt; a sum that forms, I believe, little more than half of his income.

As I have mentioned the subject of taxation in Egypt, it may gratify the reader to lay before him an accurate statement of the proportion which the land tax bears to the field income of the cultivator in this country. The following is an account of the expenditure on a field near Esne, in Upper Egypt, and the produce of it in winter 1813-1814. It must be recollected that in the higher parts of Egypt the Nile never inundates the ground, but that the fields are irrigated in high-water time either by means of wheels, or of buckets worked by men, who draw the water up from the river.

A society of twenty-six peasants had hired a piece of ground comprising seventeen feddáns, of which fourteen were destined for durra, and three for water-melons; it being the custom of poor fellahs, who have not any landed property of their own, to associate every year and hire a field.

Expenses incurred in the Cultivation of Seventeen Feddáns.

For three months twenty of the associates were occupied in drawing up water from the river in buckets, which they emptied into the small channels made to convey the water into the field. This labour was continued incessantly during the whole day until the durra approached to maturity. Those who could not themselves attend, were obliged to send in their stead labourers hired for the purpose. Besides these twenty men, two were employed in keeping the channels clear of mud and weeds; two others in partitioning the water at its issue from the channels over the field; and one man superintended the whole of the labourers, and excited them to exertion. The sheikh, or head man of the company, was alone exempt from contributing his share of actual work.

The daily labour of a fellah in drawing the bucket (which is of a more fatiguing nature than the hardest field work in Europe), was then estimated in Esne at fifteen paras, of which ten were reckoned as pay in cash, and five paras for food, (viz., lentils, oil or durra cakes,) thus making the labour of each man during the three months amount to the value of thirty-four piasters; or for the whole . . . . 850
After the conclusion of those three months, when the clusters of the durra (called then تدايل) were nearly ripe, five or six persons were employed in watching the crop of durra as well as the melon field, to guard them from nightly robbers, and from the multitude of sparrows and other small birds, which often, in spite of every precaution, deprive the fellah of the whole fruit of his labours. The daily pay of these men is estimated at twelve paras, or sixty for them all, during two months, until the durra harvest in February or March.

For the construction of water-buckets and the poles to which they are suspended, and which facilitate the operation of drawing them up.

Seed (قح) of 14 feddáns of durra, at one raf-tan per feddán, makes 3½ mud for the whole, or 2½

Seed for three feddáns of melon field . . . . . . 1

Labour of throwing the durra seed . . . . . . 3

Labour of planting the melon seed . . . . . . 2

Expenses of harvest, twelve persons for four days, at fifteen paras per day . . . . . . . . 18

Expenses of treading out the grain and winnowing it, which is performed on the spot when the produce of the field is collected in a large heap . . . . . . . . . . . . 3

Hire of the ground paid by the society to the owner of the field, 1½ mud for each feddán, we may say . . . . . . . . . . . . 20

Total Expense attending the field labour—piasters . . . 993½ Produce of Seventeen Feddâns.

The water-melons of the three feddâns, sold in the market of Esne at from two to three paras each . . . . . . . . . . 280

Each of the associates for his own eating from off the field about sixty paras . . . 40

For about three months the associates cut every day weeds and grass from the durra and melon field, which they divided among them every evening; part of the weeds and grass they sold at the market of Esne for feeding horses, camels, and asses in that town; part of them they gave to their own sheep and goats; and part was taken away from them forcibly every morning, by the soldiers of the garrison. The daily share of each associate may be computed at from six to seven paras, making for the three months about fifteen piasters per head . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 390

When the grain was divided every associate carried home four and-a-half tellys, or forty mud soogy, worth at that time thirty-two paras per mud, or thirty-two piasters for the share of each; in all . . . . . . . . 832

The dry durra stalks, which after the harvest fall to the share of each individual, and of which the leaves are given to the cattle as food in the summer months, the canes of them being used for fuel or for thatching, were worth about four piasters; or in the whole 104
Each associate besides fattened at home with the dry durra leaves a couple of sheep, which he could sell afterwards with a profit of about three piasters per head; we may say six piasters for each individual; or in the whole, 156

Total Produce of the field—piasters 1802

I must here observe that the durra harvest had been bad, because a high wind and heavy rain in November had bent or broken the stalks of the plant; otherwise the produce of the field might have been 1000 piasters in durra, instead of 832; the water having been very abundant this year. However, two or three years seldom elapse without some calamity equally distressing as heavy rain; either innumerable flights of birds, worms in the ground, or low water, which adds considerably to the labour and expense of irrigation, are circumstances that cause a great diminution in the produce: for those misfortunes, if the crop does not entirely fail, government never makes the smallest allowance.

\[
\begin{align*}
\text{Total produce} & = 1802 \\
\text{Total expense} & = 993 \frac{1}{2} \\
\text{Clear produce} & = 808 \frac{1}{2} \\
\text{The taxes of this year were twenty-nine piasters per each feddán of durra and melons, which are usually sown together, making in all} & = 493 \\
\text{Remained to the fellahs, taxes deducted} & = 315 \frac{1}{2} \end{align*}
\]
The income of a feddán (taxes deducted) was therefore 18½ piasters.

Each of the associates had for his share twelve piasters, after having worked during the whole winter season. As the durra fields are very seldom (if ever) sown twice in Upper Egypt, the man had to support himself during the rest of the year either by joining some other society to sow summer seed, or by hiring himself out as a labourer.

The produce of the corn field is better, although the seed produces much less, because corn does not require such long continued or incessant labour of irrigation. At the same period, the produce of a corn field near Esne, was 84 piasters per feddán; the expenses may be calculated at 15 piasters, and the taxes laid upon corn fields were then 40½ piasters; there remained a clear profit of 29 piasters.

The corn measures of Upper Egypt are the erdeb and the tellys. The erdeb has 12 muds, or 24 kadahs, or 48 raftans. The tellys has 16 muds. Of the mud there are two kinds, the mud el shoone (or the granary mud), and the mud el soogy (or souky), the market mud; 16 of the mud el shoone make 9 mud el soogy. The seed of the 14 feddáns of durra was 3½ mud soogy. The produce yielded 40 muds for each associate, or 1040 for the whole, which makes 297 for each mud of seed. The durra is usually reckoned at 300 for 1 of seed. The corn produce at Esne in middling years 25 from 1; in the better ground of the neighbouring plains of Thebes, it produces 35 for 1.
The present system of government is to oblige the peasants to sow the whole ground belonging to their village, whether good or bad, whether elevated or not, and therefore, whether irrigable or not. The bad ground is then partitioned out amongst the cultivators, and they must pay the taxes from it in the same proportion as from the good. Of late all the peasants’ cattle has likewise been taxed, and they are to pay the tithes from it, a thing never before known in Egypt, and I believe, unknown in any other part of the Turkish dominions. The grain which they do not want for their own families, they are not at liberty to sell at pleasure, but must let government have it at a fixed price. The erdeb of durra was then worth at Esne 5½ piasters; 1 Spanish dollar = 8 piasters; 1 piaster = 40 paras.

472.

فم يبسم، و يد تذبح

A mouth that prays, a hand that kills.

On hypocrites.

473.

في الزوايا خبايا

In the corners are hidden treasures.

Wealth is sometimes found where least expected. خبايا plural of زاوية “the corner of a building.” خبايا “hidden treasures,” a word of frequent use.
474.

فر من المطر تعد تحت المزراب

He fled from the rain, and sat down under the water-spout.

475.

فرد كلمة تكفى العاتل

One single word only is sufficient for the wise.

فرد instead of واحد is much used in the Syrian dialect; not so frequently in the Egyptian.

476.*

في كل رأس حكمة

In every head is some wisdom.

477.

في بردعه مسلة

In his jackass-saddle sticks a needle.

Secret vexations plague him. بردة the saddle for asses used in Egypt. مسلة a long iron packing needle, used likewise in sewing the saddle.

478.

فريع البط عوام

The young ones of the duck are swimmers.

Young minds are inflamed by example. عوام or يعوم in the common Egyptian dialect, signifies "to swim." يعوم is likewise used, but not frequently.
479.

(Standing) in the middle window, he tickles the hinder parts of those who sit in the upper window, and insults (by offensive noises) those in the lower window.

He behaves with vulgarity and indecency to people above and below him. طَلَقَهُ بَيْنَيتَ in the Egyptian dialect, "to tickle the hinder parts of a person;" it has also another sense.

480.

فَلَنَّ حَيَّ قَالَ وَمَنْ نَحْسَهُ يَتَحَاوَر

Such a man performed the pilgrimage. "Yes," quoth one, "and for his bad doings remains resident at Mekka."

يَتَحَاوَر to become a neighbour either of the Beitullah of Mekka, or of the Mosque of Medina, or any other celebrated mosque; or to reside there for some time, which is regarded as very meritorious. Those persons, especially foreigners, who attend lectures in a mosque, are for that reason called مَجَارِئ. Thus at Cairo the neighbours of the Azhar (مَجَارِئ الأَزْهَر) are far famed.

481.*

فَقْرَةُ جَانِهُما مَا يَنْبَغِي

Poverty and anger do not agree.

The poor must have pliant tempers. جَانِهَا in Egypt means "anger;" it is sometimes used, but not often, for "folly."

482.
فوطه بحراشي و ما جمعها شيء

A napkin with (fine) borders and nothing under it.

Puff without reality. Presents to people of high rank are often placed upon a board or plate, and covered with fine embroidered towels or handkerchiefs (فوطه).

483.
فغرا و يمشوا مشي المرآ

They are paupers, and walk about with the air of grandees.

484.
فرحنا بالنيل جا النيل غرتنا

We rejoiced at (the rising of) the Nile; the Nile came and we were drowned.

485.
في رأسه صوت لا بد ما يزعجه

He has a voice in his head, and will certainly give it utterance.

A person follows his inclination or natural propensities. The saying is originally applied to a jackass that brays notwithstanding the severest beating.

486.
في كل يوم يزداد ابن ادم عقل جديد

Every day man increases in new understanding.
487.

The wedding with its broth (i.e. the entertainments) concluded; and then every one put on his rags.

When disguise is no longer necessary or advantageous the natural character is resumed. At weddings even the poorest people dress, if not in their own, at least in fine clothes borrowed for the occasion. خلف “a torn cloth,” “a rag.”

488.

A mouse fell from the roof. “Come, take some refreshment,” said the cat. “Stand thou off,” she replied.

Mistrust any offer of assistance from the enemy. is used as an invitation to partake of food, &c. To decline it the reply is هنيأ “May it be wholesome food to thee!” ابعد عني a common expression implying with harshness “keep off,” “stand off.”

489.

(He is) of more corrupt doings than the moth.

is the moth that feeds upon clothes, books, furniture, &c.
490.

في كله ريق ابليس مفتاح

The enchantments of the devil are (only) a key in his hand.

رضي plural of "a charm," "enchantment." The saying is addressed to a malicious sorcerer. The dealing in charms and incantations is extremely common throughout Egypt. There is not any village, however small, in which they may not be obtained from the fakih, or village priest.

491.*

فر من الموت يورث الموت ونع

He fled from death, and fell into it.

492.*

فر اختزاه الله خير من قتل يرجمه الله

"He fled, disgrace upon him!" is better than, "He was slain, God have mercy upon him!"

Said in derision of cowardly soldiers. The expression اختزاه الله or, as they likewise say in Egypt الله يخزيك is very common.

493.

وفق كل طامة طامة

Upon every misfortune another misfortune.

One misfortune after another.
494.

الفضل للمبدي و أن أحس الفقدي

The merit belongs to the beginner, should even the successor do better.

To the same purport is a phrase often used "the merit belongs to the predecessor." This is taken from the subjoined beautiful verses, celebrated among the Arabs, and inserted by Hariri into the Introduction of his Makamát, assigning thereby the merit for that species of poetry to his predecessor Hamadání, surnamed Bediya e Zamán. They have been ascribed to several poets, but were probably composed by Ibn Malek Ibn e'Rakaa, of Damascus, who lived in the eighth century of the Christian era.

فلا قبل مبكاها بكية صابة
بسعدى شفيت القلب قبل التندم
ولكن بكية تبليس فهل تدلي البكا
بكاهاف فقلت الفضل للمتقدم

If before she herself wept, love for Sada had caused my tears to flow,
I should have lightened my heart before repentance (choked it);
But she wept first, her tears excited mine,
The merit, I cried, belongs to the predecessor.
495.
A decent public woman, rather than an indecent honest woman.

"decently covered," "decent in circumstances," it is applied both to the character and condition of a person. محرجة or is a woman who frequently lifts up a corner of her veil so that people may catch a glimpse of her face or her fine jewels, or else one who stretches out her legs to display her ankle-rings, and in general behaves with as much indecency as she can without quite exposing her character.

ةقصبة is a generic term applied in Egypt to all sorts of bad and public women. There is a particular class of the latter in this country, respecting whom some notices may prove interesting. In every town, indeed it may be said in almost every large village, of Egypt, individuals are found belonging to a tribe of prostitutes called Ghazýe or in the plural Ghowázy. They are a race distinct from all other public women, and relate with pride that their origin is Arabian, and that they are of the true Bedouin blood. Among themselves they assume the name of Barameke or Barmeky (بَرَمْكَة), by which, however, they are less generally known than by that of Ghowázy. They boast that their origin is derived from the celebrated Barmeky (or Barmecide) family, the viziers of Haroun er' Rasheed; but in what manner any descent can be traced to them, why they emigrated to Egypt, and how they chose to adopt their vile profession, not one of them knows. They usually marry among themselves, at least the males never marry any girl but a Barmeky; and few of the Barmeky females condescend to take a husband of any other tribe. All their females, without exception, are educated for the purpose of prostitution. Their law is, that a girl, as soon as she is marriageable, must yield to the embraces of a stranger, and soon after be married to a young man of her own tribe. Thus the husband is never permitted to receive his bride in a state of virgin purity; but the Ghowázy father sells the first favours of his daughter to a stranger, making a bargain with the highest bidder, generally in presence of the sheikh of the village, or chief of the town, in which the parties reside. These women, and all the females of this tribe marry, immediately after the nuptial ceremony, receive the visits of any man who presents himself, while the husband performs the duties of a menial servant in the family; he is also the musician who plays when his wife dances in public, and is consequently employed in seeking for persons who may be induced to visit his wife, with whom he himself cohabits only by stealth; for a Ghazye would think herself disgraced, or at least would be exposed to the sneers of the sisterhood, if it were known that she admitted her husband to any familiarity or participation in the enjoyment of her charms. Among them, I have reason to believe, (but am not certain,) that the Ghazy (so the male is called) has but one wife. The men never follow any profession; they are neither cultivators, nor traders, nor artists; the dealing in asses, of which they rear an excellent breed, being the only branch of industry to which they apply themselves, besides the sale of their partners’ charms. They are as much despised as their females are distinguished and often honoured; the birth of a male child is considered by a Ghazy as a great misfortune, because he is an unprofitable article—a mere incumbrance—and the whole male sex look up to the females for food, clothes, and protection. The Ghowázys have in every town or considerable village a small quarter assigned to them, where they live in large huts or tents, seldom in houses; never associating with other public women, whom they regard as much inferior to themselves in rank. They are generally, but not always, dancers and singers, and as such many travellers have seen and admired them. Like true Bedouins they are constantly moving about, either paying visits to the sisterhood established in neighbouring places, attending the country fairs, or the camps of the troops. They have made it a law among them, never to refuse the embraces of any person, whatever may be his condition, so that he pays: at country fairs, therefore, the most fashionable Ghazye, glittering with gold, will admit the visit of any clown or fellah for a sum not exceeding twopence. Some of them have accumulated considerable wealth and keep great establishments. Half-a-dozen black female slaves, (the profits of whose prostitution they claim as their own property,) two or three dromedaries, as many horses, half-a-dozen asses, are not unfrequently seen in one family; while the dress and ornaments of those females, consisting in gold-embroidered silk gowns, and many chains of sequins that hang about the head, neck, and breast, with heavy golden bracelets, are sometimes worth from two to three hundred pounds sterling. In features they may be distinguished from the common Egyptians, and appear to bear traces of Arabian origin, especially in their fine aquiline noses. Their beauty is famous throughout Egypt; the greater number, however, cannot be reckoned handsome, yet I have seen some that might have served as models of Phryne for a painter; their skin not being browner than that of the inhabitants of southern Europe. Instances are not uncommon of a Ghazye marrying a village sheikh, especially of the Howara Arabs settled in Upper Egypt, who consider it an honour to carry off so fair a prize, nor would the Ghazye bestow herself in matrimony on any common peasant. But these instances only occur when the Ghazye has lost her husband, or divorced him, and has become tired of her mode of life, in the outset of which she can never be induced to renounce her hereditary profession. When such an event is to take place, the Ghazye, before she marries the sheikh, makes a solemn vow upon the tomb of some saint never to be unfaithful to her new husband, and sacrifices a sheep in honour of that patron. I have been assured on good authority that no Ghazye married under these circumstances was ever known to violate her vow. The number in Egypt is very considerable; I believe that they may be fairly estimated, males and females, at from six to eight thousand persons. Their principal settlements are in the towns of the Delta, and in Upper Egypt at Kenne, where they have a colony of at least three hundred individuals. On the great festival of the Saint el Bedowy, at Tanta in the Delta, (which is celebrated three times every year,) an hundred thousand persons sometimes crowd together from all parts of Egypt, to perform a pilgrimage resembling in many respects that of Mekka, which swallows up the savings collected by the poorer classes of Cairo.
At one of those festivals I have seen above six hundred Ghazye assembled in tents pitched about the town. Some of the most wealthy Ghazye perform the pilgrimage to Mekka themselves in great state, and assume ever after the honourable title of Hadjy, not changing however their mode of life. The Ghowázys are protected by the government of Egypt, to which they pay an annual capitation tax. In the time of the Mamelouks their influence in the open country was very considerable, and the protection of a Ghazye was courted by many respectable persons. The Arnaut soldiers, who are at present masters of Egypt, have plundered several and killed others in fits of jealousy, so that many have fled from the garrison towns into the open country. They have a custom in Upper Egypt, on the feast-day after Ramadhan, of paying visits to all the first people of the town or village, when they dance for a few minutes in the court-yard of the house and receive a present at parting. Their behaviour towards those who do not meddle with them is much less indecent than might be imagined; but woe to him whose affections they captivate! At every place where they are numerous one of them is regarded as head of their community, and assumes the title of “Emeer el Nezel” (امیر النزل), or “chief of the settlement;” which, however, does not invest her with any authority over the others. At Cairo itself their number is but small; they live all together in a large khan, called Hosh Bardak, just below the castle. In a city where among women of every rank chastity is so scarce as at Cairo, it could not be expected that public prostitution should thrive.

The Ghowázys have established among themselves a vocabulary of the most common nouns and phrases, in which they are able to converse without being understood by those who visit them.

There is another tribe of public women in Egypt called Halebye (حلبية), they are fewer in numbers than the Ghowázys, but like them intermarry among themselves. The men are tinkers, and horse or ass doctors; the women for the greater part, but I believe not all, common prostitutes. They wander over the country much like Gypsies. Of the latter, which are called here غتجر Ghadjar (in Syria Korbat), very few families are found in Egypt; they are more numerous in Syria.

496.

قيقية كل انسان ما يخصه

The value of each man consists in what he does well.

is here equivalent to يتحمل It is in this sense usually, but not always, applied to handiwork. The Syrians say for meaning “I cannot (do it),” which the Egyptians express by 497.*

قصبة ما كنت بدنا كنست المستجد نال دي قصبة

A harlot did not sweep her own house, but cleaned out the mosque. A certain person said, “that harlot loves goodly works.”

498.

الفحصة ما تكون و الاماء في الزبر ما يروب

A harlot does not repent; and water in a jar does not become sour milk.

زهر a large jar in which the water is kept for every family's use. يروب is applied to milk when it turns sour. In Egypt, therefore, sour milk is called رأيب.

499.

قَر و زِبَت دَا خَرَاب بَيت

Moonshine and oil, those are the ruin of a house.

To light the lamp while the moon shines is an extravagant expense that will ruin the family. قْر is often used instead of نور القمر.

500.

قَر يَحِرس تِمَس قال انظر الحارس و المارس

A monkey watches (a field of) tormus. "Look," said one, "at the guard and the crop."

This alludes to a despicable person occupying a despicable office. المارس in the dialect of the peasants frequently is used instead of الزرع "the sown field." Tormus is the lupinus, a bean of bitter taste and but little esteemed. A person to whom a small compliment is given, shows his contempt of the gift by returning it and saying to the donor تَرْتِبَه تِرمُس "(buy and) chew some tormus with it."

Boiled tormus beans are sold in the morning at the bazár, and principally eaten by children without either salt or butter. The meal of this bean is used instead of soap by the poorer classes for washing their hands, and on this account it is very generally cultivated in Egypt.
501.

They said to some blind men, "oil is become dear."
They replied, "that is a thing with which we can dispense."

استغني means here (as observed in the explanation of Proverb 259) "not to be in want of." دا دا used instead of هذا

502.

They said to the asses of the gypsum mill, "the day of resurrection is a terrible day!" "We have neither worn saddles nor eaten barley," they replied.

Those have most to dread punishment in the other world who lead a life of undeserved enjoyment in this. The idle asses kept merely for pleasure in Cairo have fine saddles, and are fed with plenty of barley or beans; while the hard-working ass goes with a bare back, and gets nothing to eat but straw. عظمي "great, wonderful, terrible." The gypsum or plaster used at Cairo is brought from the eastern mountain opposite to Helouan, a village on the bank of the Nile, about five hours distant to the south of Cairo. The whole desert is overspread in those mountains with loose gypsum, covered with a thin coat of sand. The gypsum is pulverised in the mills at Cairo.
503.

The fish binny said, "if thou canst find a better fish than myself do not eat me."

The binny is reckoned the finest tasted fish of the river Nile. This proverb is applied to fools whose vanity is such that they pride themselves on the circumstance which contributes to their misfortune, because it distinguishes them among their equals.

504.

He is scabby-headed and quarrels about the comb.

On a person's disputing about a thing of which he does not stand in need.

505.

(Like) assignments upon paupers.

Or "titles, receipts, assignments, bills," &c.

506.*

A lock on a ruined place.

Said of unnecessary pains taken to preserve what is not worth keeping.
507.

The Moggrebynes said to the people of Cairo, “Why do not ye love us?” “On account of your ill-natured character,” they replied.

This saying is applied to a person who expresses his surprise at not having any friends. The Moggrebynes form a colony of very wealthy merchants at Cairo, established in the quarters of Ghoorye and Fahamyn, who trade in the produce of their native country. They have the reputation of being ill-bred, surly, proud, and very obstinate, and are therefore disliked; although, with respect to probity, they bear a character superior to the Moslims of any other nation. The word of a Moggrebyn (كلمة مغربية) has become a proverbial saying in trade, but nobody ever mentions the word of a Syrian, a Hedjázi, or a Turk.

508.

They said, “O priest! may God make you a lay brother once more!” “That is a step downwards,” he replied.

On foolish congratulations or wishes. In saying اهلا وسهلا you are intended, meaning “God restore thee to thy prosperous state!” Thus they say اللهم يزك شباب or the الله يزك العائمة “God restore thee to health!” “God restore thee to youth!”
509.

 قالوا ايش حال مريضكم قالوا جخير كان يبض علي
الرض مار يبض علي مدره

They asked, “How does your patient?” “Very well,” they replied, “he used to spit upon the ground, now he spits upon his breast.”

On the delusive consolations offered by medical attendants. A patient who cannot even throw his spittle upon the ground, must be, of course, in a state of extreme debility.

510.

قالوا للدجاجة كلی ولا تبتعزي تاکت ما اقدر اخلي عادتی

They said to the hen, “Eat, and do not scatter (the corn) about.” “I cannot leave off my habits,” she replied.

It is useless to instruct an inveterate scoundrel in morals. يبتعزز among the Egyptians means “to throw about,” “to scatter;” it comes from the word بتعزز but differs in signification.

511.

قرموط ملحوت سدر في بركة سابو
(Like) a karmoot rubbed with seder in a tank of soap (water).

This is said of a person whom it is difficult to catch or find; one who eludes all search. قرموط kar-moot is a fish of the river Nile, without any scales, and of a very smooth skin. Seder (سدر) signifies the leaves of the nebek or seder tree, (rhamnus lotus,) which, being dried and pulverized, are used as soap by people of the poorest class in washing their hands, and by the richer classes in washing the dead bodies of their friends. ملعوت in the Egyptian dialect has the same sense as مدهون.

512.*

قال ايش مراد الامي قال فئة قرن ان لم ينظر يناظع

It was asked, "What is the wish of the blind?"

"A basket full of horns," they replied, "if he does not see he may like butting."

The blind men of Cairo, especially those quartered in the mosques, are notorious for their very quarrelsome temper. The multitudes of blind men daily fed in the Mosque el Azhar have frequently committed violent outrages in fighting one with another.

513.

قالوا للديك ايش ابعت في نومك قال يغرلوا

They asked the cock, "What hast thou seen in thy sleep?" "I saw people sifting (corn)," he replied.
514.*
قال يا أبي الذي يغسل يده يأكل معنا قال ولا أنت أيضا
"Father," he said, "the person who washes his hand is he to eat with us?" "Neither he nor thou also," he replied.

On a person who, confident of obtaining some advantage for himself, endeavours to thwart others in their wishes, but finds at last that his own prospects have vanished. In the East, before a man begins to dine he always washes his hands, or at least the right hand, which alone is used at meals.

515.
قالوا للفار خذلك رطليين سكر و وصل دي الكتاب للقط قال الاجرة طيبة لكن فيها مشقة
They said to the mouse, "Take these two pounds of sugar and carry this letter to the cat." "The fee is good enough," she replied, "but (the business) is tiresome."

مكتوب "a letter."

516.
قالوا للحمار ليش ما تشر قال ما يطللي علي المعحال
They asked the ass, "Why do not you ruminate?" "Conceit," he said, "never deludes me."

الاشترار "the chewing and ruminating of cows and camels." ما يطللي علي المعحال verbatim, "deceit cannot be gilt (or laid like gold leaf) over or upon me,” “does not make me appear to myself better than I am.” The expression هذا ما ينطلي عَلَيْي is often used, and conveys the same meaning as “this can never enter my head,” “I can have no idea of it,” “I am not to be gilt over with this.”

517.
قطع الفئور بزيت الخرز ما هو كثير
To cut off the mice with hemp oil, is not too much expense.

Do not care for expense in freeing yourself from an enemy. The hemp oil mixed with arsenic is used as poison for mice.

518.
قال يا عبد اشترتك قال هذا لك قال تهرب قال هذا لي

519.
قطعوها صحت للطنبورة
They cut it to pieces; it served well for (the covering of) the drum.

Commonly said of a broken or spoiled piece of any thing, which can, however, be still employed in some manner, so as not to be wholly useless.
520.

They said to the wolf, "For what art thou following those poor little sheep?" He replied, "The dust (upon which they tread) is good for poor little eyes."

On the hypocritical professions of tyrants. The diminutive is often used not only because the object in question is really smaller or inferior in quantity or quality, but to give a kind of bonhomie to the expression; and in this sense the Bedouins especially use it on many occasions. Thus "poor little thing" might be applied in a kind and compassionate manner to a person by no means diminutive in stature or wanting money. العربيةات is the diminutive or تصغير عيون of the eyes. ما لك is a common expression in Egypt, not implying "what is it to thee?" but, "what is the matter with thee?" "what dost thou want?" The Syrians say in the same sense 521.

They asked the cows, "If you die, do they not put you into shrouds?" They replied, "Would to God they may leave our skins upon us!"

Instead of ليط the Egyptians more frequently say ريت and then it would stand...
ARABIC PROVERBS.

522.

"My Lord," he said, "(I beg of you) the melon peels."
"Man," quoth he, "thy Lord eats the melon together with the melon peels."

一件事 signifies a piece of melon peel. When a person eats melons in the bazaar or before the coffee shops, he is always accosted by beggars, who ask for the peels, which they eat, as all the peasants do when hungry.

523.

A monkey solicited hospitality from demons. "Young gentleman," they replied, "the house is quite empty of provisions."

It is in vain to ask charity from wretches. ناف in the Egyptian dialect is the same as طلب الصيانة in opposition to يضيف which signifies "to grant hospitality." ابن الشيخ is a title given from mere politeness and equivalent to "gentleman," or "young gentleman." متجدة الدار is to be understood as if preceded by "the house from which every thing has been removed," or "which has remained empty of provisions."
524.

قد ضَلَّ مَن كَانَت العَمَيْان تُهديه

Verily he loses his way whom blind men guide.

A verse is cited which expresses the same meaning:

إذا كان الغراب دليل قوم
يمروا بهم علي جيف الكلاب

When crows are the guides of people,
They lead them to the carcasses of dogs.

525.

قد تَبْلَى المَلِحة بالطلَق

Even the handsome (woman) experiences the misfortune of divorce.

This is said in consolation of people's sufferings.

526.*

قد يتوَّبُ السيف و هو مغَد

Truly, the sword inspires dread even in its scabbard.

527.*

قلبه لا يَنفَعَ الا بالشر

From his pen nothing flows but malice.

يرفع originally means “blood flowing out of the nose.” The reproach conveyed in this proverb is more applicable to Western than to Eastern writers.
Oriental authors are distinguished for great gentleness towards each other; paper wars seldom rage among them, and they render justice one to another perhaps in a strain of excessive panegyric; and if they correct an error, it is with coolness and moderation. The total want of publications resembling our Reviews, and the fear of broaching new doctrines or opinions, contribute probably to this spirit of indulgence.

528.

القصاب لا تسولي كثرة الغنم

The butcher is not startled at the multiplicity of sheep.

A tyrant perpetrates bloody acts without compunction. "to be afraid," or "amazed."

529.*

قبل السحاب أصابي الوكفت

Before the clouds (appeared) the rain came upon me.

The accident happened quite unexpectedly. The term الوكفت for "rain," is no longer used at Cairo.

530.

اتبِق من قول بلا فعل

(It is still) worse than a promise without performance.

قول a word, a saying, a promise.
531.

"كيَب و الله المسبب"

Be diligent, and God will send profit.

"كيفب" “to make small balls or pills;” this generally implies “to be diligently occupied,” “to work carefully.” الله المسبب “God is the first cause, the cause of causes.” This is often said in trade, and then means, “God is the cause of thy goods being sold, the cause of thy profits.” (جعله اسباب). The word اسباب in the Egyptian dialect, signifies “trade, buying and selling in general.” يسبب يسبب “he trades.” رجل منتسب for “trader or merchant,” is more commonly used than رجل تاجر.

532.

"كانتها من سواقي التجهزة وقعت اضراسها و قتلت ماية شبب"

As if she was one of the water-wheels of D'jyze, her back teeth fell out, and one hundred oxen were killed by her (with the work).

This saying is used in derision of old women. مرس plural of سباحة a water-wheel. means the back teeth of a person, also the teeth of a water-wheel. is the Egyptian pronunciation of "a young man;" the peasants also give this name to a strong ox—hence the pun which occurs in this place. If a water-wheel be half broken, the oxen that draw it are soon overworked and killed by excessive labour. The people of Djiye are the Bæotians of Egypt, they are despised for their stupidity and slovenly negligence, and often afford subject for ridicule.

533.
كل ما تشهيه نفسك و البس ما تلبس الناس

Eat whatever thou likest, but dress as others do.

Do whatever you like at home, but in public behave according to received usage.

534.
كلب ينح بما يعض

A dog that barks does not bite.

535.*
كم خروف عند الشرا و كم كلب في المرح

How many sheep at the roaster's? and how many dogs in the sheepfold?

How many good people are sacrificed while the wicked enjoy their life in repose. the person who sells roasted meat in the bázár.
536.
A hand accustomed to take is far from giving.

537.
The hunting dogs have scratched faces.

538.
In whatever manner thou strikest a scabby-headed person (on the head), his blood will flow.

539.
He was an iron block or anvil, and then become a hammer.

The same meaning is also expressed by the phrase

Beaten—but to-day beater
540.

كسل ما يطعم عسل

The lazy is not fed on honey.

541.

كل من خبز الرعفة ولا تأكل من خبز المانة

Eat of the bread made by a woman with a bleeding nose; but do not eat the bread of her who constantly reminds thee of having given it.

The dirtiest bread, made by a woman with a bleeding nose." رعفة المان signifies a person who recounts his own good works, and reminds another of the favours he has conferred on him. In the East, there is no sort of insulting language which hurts the feelings so much as being reminded of favours conferred; probably because the people are conscious of their own ingratitude.

542.

كل رأس مطااطي تحتها ألف بلية

Under every down-hanging head dwell a thousand mischiefs.

This is said of persons who in company sit with downcast eyes and low-bent head, brooding all the while on evil designs. مطااطي in the Egyptian dialect signifies "bent downwards."
543.*

كل من قال نار احترق نه

Whoever cries "Fire," has he his mouth burnt?

Those who cry out most loudly have often the least reason to complain.

544.

كِشْكار دايم ولا علامة مقطوعة

Coarse meal for ever, rather than fine flour at certain times only.

This proverb is founded upon the saying of Mohammed recorded in the Hadyth or Traditions:

خير العمال ادوها و انقل

The best works are those which last, although they should not be of great importance.

كِشْكار is the "coarse meal used by peasants."

علامة "the flour of meal." مقطوعة "cut off," "at intervals only."

545.

كل شاة معلقة من عرقوبها

Every sheep is suspended by its (own) heels.

In a future state, none will be made to suffer for the crimes of others. عرقوب is the sinew or tendon (of Achilles) by which butchers hang up the slaughtered sheep.
ARABIC PROVERBS.

546.

كَفَّيَ عني نساكي ما اريد جخورك

\textit{Let me only be excused from thy bad smells; I do not want thy perfumes.}

A speech in the closet from a husband to his wife. Leave off thy rudeness, I require no civilities.

547.

كَلّ ما ضربت له ولد على مخالل

\textit{As often as I strike a voted for him he hangs up (another) barley-sack.}

No sooner is one business finished than he sets about another. Among Arab sheiks in the desert, as well as in the villages, it is customary that when guests arrive on horseback, each horse is attached by a chain on his legs to an iron spike driven for that purpose into the ground, either before the tent or in the court-yard of the house. This spike, about eight inches long, is called \textit{voted} (روذ) and every horseman carries one with him. As soon as the guest alights from his horse the master of the tent or house takes from him the barley-sack (مخلل) in which the horse receives his food, (and which the horseman likewise carries with him,) and hangs it upon a post or nail. From this his people take it in the evening and fill it with barley. In this proverb the master's servant complains, that as soon as he has driven one \textit{voted} into the ground, another horseman arrives, whose barley-sack is hung up, and whose \textit{voted} must likewise be driven into the ground.
548.*
كونوا اخوة و اتحاسبوا حساب التجار
Be brothers, and keep between you the accounts of merchants.

549.
كيف جاء ولا ورثة مال
A handful of consideration rather than a woebe of riches.

Woebe (ورثة) is an Egyptian corn measure, of which six make an erdeb.

550.
كان يعلف بقطع يمينة مار يعلف بنكهة ماله
He was wont to swear “by the cutting off of his right hand!” He now swears “by the giving of his money to the poor!”

This is said of persons who having been poor acquire wealth and immediately assume the language of rich people. A low fellow without money, swears, “May my hand be cut off if—” (the amputation of the hand is a thief’s punishment). The great and rich men swear, “I will give my whole estates or wealth to the poor if—.”

551.
كل و اشرب و خلَّي الدنيا تخرب
Eat and drink, and let the world go to ruin.
552.

كل واحد في سروه يبيع خروجه.

Every one sells his rags in his own market.

Every one parades or displays his distinguishing qualities in his own circle of acquaintances.

553.

كرامة لقصر نهد خصنا

For the sake of thy palace shall we demolish our hut?

القصر is an Arab hut constructed of brushwood or reeds. قصر a stately building or palace. From its plural which the peasants pronounce el oksor, we have formed Luxor, the temple of Thebes. كرامة لي (pronounced kormály) does not mean in the usual sense “for my honour,” or “to my honour,” but merely “for my sake.”

554.

كرم ما يستغني

The generous is never satisfied with riches.

He wants money that he may bestow it on others.

555.

كلنا بهذة العلة و الطبيب الله

We are all (afflicted) with this disease; God is the physician.

Said in offering consolation to others.
556.
كل الهدية و اكسر الزبدية

_Eat the present (sent to thee) and break the dish (in which it was brought)._

The dish will otherwise remind you of the obligation. زبدية is a small basin of earthenware glazed on the inside; it is usual to serve up sweetmeats in dishes of this kind.

557.
كل حلو ممنوع

_Every thing forbidden is sweet._

558.
كل وهم وهمان

_Every man—and his own care._

Every person has his share of trouble. وهمة, put instead of وهم.

559.
كن يدبدي تام و إلا فلا تلعب بالتوراة

_Be a thorough Jew, or else do not play with the Old Testament._

Be sincerely attached to a religion however bad, rather than laugh at this, thy religion. التوراة the Books of Moses, which are respected by the Moslems as derived from heaven, but which they believe to have suffered by the interpolations of Jews and Christians, because the mission of Mohammed was, as they pretend, foretold in the original text.
560.*

Like a cat that eats her own young ones.
Said of a mother who neglects her children.

561.*

The day obliterates the word (or promise) of the night.

This verse was quoted in reply to Haroun el Rasheed by a beautiful woman who at night had promised that she would bestow her favours on him the next morning; but when day appeared she declined the performance of her promise. It has thus become proverbial. A similar saying is more generally current at Cairo, expressing that "the promise of the night is rubbed with butter, which melts away when the day shines upon it."

This means, that, when passion has ceased, we forget the promise made while it influenced us.

562.

Like the ass's tail, it never increases, and never diminishes.

Applied to one who remains constantly in the same condition. There is a popular notion, I know not whether founded on fact, that the tail of an ass never increases in length, but remains as it was when the animal was born, except as to the growth of hair. ذنب is used in Egypt for ذنب

563.

Like a needle that clothes people and is itself naked.

This alludes to persons under similar circumstances; and is taken from that fine verse—

کست قیصرًا نوب التجمال و نبًا
وکسری و بانت وهي عاریة التجسم

The same meaning is still more forcibly expressed in the following verse—

شرت کاتی دبالة نصب تضی للناس وهي تحرق

I have become like a wick placed in a lamp,
It affords light to the people while itself is burnt.

564.*

كن ذكور اذا كنت كذورا

Be of good memory if you become a liar.

565.*

كالکیاة لا امل ثابت ولا فرع نابت

Like the truffle, without any (known) origin, and not sending forth any branches.

کیاة is a species of truffle found in the deserts of Syria, (I believe not in Egypt,) which affords nourishment to many Bedouin families. Like the European truffles they produce no plant, nor is it known how they are propagated. The Arabs say that they are produced by thunder and lightning.

566.
كِلَامٌ لَبِينٌ وَظَلَمٌ بَيْنِ
Soft words, but open injustice.

567.*
كَمْ مِنْ يَدِ ضَعَافَةِ الكبْسِ خَرَقَتَا في الْإِلْفَانِ
How many a hand weak in gaining is prodigal in spending.

568.
الْكَلَبِ ما يَنْبُجُ فِي دَارِهِ
The dog does not bark in his own house.

569.*
كَلِ عَبْدٍ اَنْ جَاعِ سَرَقَ وَانْ شَبَعْ نَسَقَ
Every slave when he is hungry steals, and when he is satiated, practises wickedness.

On the effects of poverty and wealth upon low-minded persons.
570.

Like the impotent, who glories in the vigour of his father.

Applied to those who without any just personal pretensions assume airs in consequence of the merits of their ancestors. عنيس signifies one naturally impotent. The ancient Arabs quoted on this subject the following fine verse—

أن النبي مس يقول ها أنا ذا ليس الفقي من يقول كان أبي

He is the truly noble youth, who says “Behold, I am the man,” not he who says “My father was.”

What is above translated vigour, is in the original Arabic a term for which the Dictionary may be consulted.

571.

Hearsay is not like ocular testimony.

is ocular evidence, equivalent to مشاهدة العيون.
572.

Lo abseret jhayi deshe balqodem

If thou wert to see my luck, thou wouldst trample it under foot.

Said by the unlucky.

573.

Liyat onajel yhecm نفسه

Did but the radish digest its ownself!

Could we but rid ourselves of the person whom we have invited to be our assistant. It is commonly believed in the East that radishes eaten at or after meals facilitate the digestion of other food, although they themselves remain undigested in the stomach.

574.

Lw fetsi ibn amd um al tلمر ما اكله

If a man were to inquire after (the dirty manner of making) bread, he would not eat it.

575.

Lw yikun alaﬁl zm dzghm bkan byfe zm khashb

If the fellah were made of gold, certain parts of him would be of wood.

Although a low person may attain an exalted station, and however his manners may be improved, some remnants of his former meanness will always be conspicuous. Here may be quoted the following verse—

لقد كشف الآثراً منك خليقاً من اللوم كنت في غطاء من الفقر

Riches have disclosed in thy character the bad qualities formerly concealed by thy poverty.

576.

لو اودت لك العشيرة ما رايهم الآ ظلام

If I had lighted for thee the ten (fingers as candles) thou wouldst still regard them as if they were in darkness.

Said of one who forgets or never acknowledges the most signal services rendered to him.

577.

لو لا الكسورة ما كانت الفاخورة

Were it not for fractures there would be no pottery.

Misfortunes are not without some good consequences. كسر

578.

لو ان رزته في است الكلب الله

If his gain lay in the hinder (or filthiest) part of a dog he would eat it.

On a person descending to the vilest modes of obtaining profit.
579.

If they had not dragged me from under him, I should have killed him.

Said in ridicule of a bragging fellow.

580.

If his mouth were silent another part of him would speak.

Alluding to one who talked incessantly.

581.*

If the falcon had been good for any thing, he would not have escaped the sportsman.

On a person indebted for safety to his insignificance or trifling character. In the Egyptian dialect the phrase انام شى نانى “such a thing has escaped me;” “I have not been able to lay hold of it.”

582.*

Cursed be the bath that has shown to me the hinder part of him whose face (even) I should not like to see.

Accident has thrown us into the society of one whose very aspect is disagreeable to us.
583.
لحمها و لحمه ما يضحكوا في قدر

Her meat and his meat cannot be cooked together in the (same) pot.

Said of a husband and wife ill-suited to each other.

"the preparing of victuals." In this sense ينضج is used by the Egyptians.

584.
لو كانت تمطر كانت غيمت

If it were to rain, clouds would have appeared.

585.*
للبع ما حازت يده

To the lion belongs whatever his hand has seized.

586.*
لو لا الدموع احترت الفصوع

Were it not for the tears the ribs would have been burnt.

Tears soothe the pangs of distress.

587.*
ليس الفرس بجلة و برتعه

The mare is not (to be valued) according to its housings and its ornaments in front.

جل the housings of a horse. The word برتع is used to denote the ornaments of a horse’s head and foreparts.
588.

ليس في سفر حيث لا ما ولأ شجار

(He is) not in hell where neither water nor trees (can be found).

A reply to those who bewail without reason the situation of another person. سفر is one of the upper regions in the Mohammedan hell.

589.

لو وقعت من السما صفعة ما سقطت الأ على قفاه

If a blow were to fall from heaven it would not light upon anything but his neck.

Said of the unfortunate. (Respecting a blow on the neck among the Egyptians and Arabs, see No. 2.)

590.

لو أخرجت في الأفان لما مات أحد

If I were to trade in winding-sheets, no one would die.

On a person unfortunate in commercial speculations.

591.*

ليس كل من سواد وجهه قال أنا حداد

Not every one whose face has been blackened can say "I am a blacksmith." 592.

The tongue of experience has most truth.

593.

If the gain were to approach his mouth, he would turn his back to it.

Said of the negligent and indolent. ثنا signifies not only the hinder part of the neck, but also the back.

594.

A hand that has been short in rendering services to others, do not stretch it out in quest of high places.

The selfish person is unworthy of a high station.
595.

لا يقرأ الآية العذاب وكتاب الصواعق

He reads nothing but the sentences of torments and the book of thunderbolts.

Said of a person who always frightens others with disastrous or portentous news. آية العذاب are those passages of the Koran which threaten the wicked with hell-torments. كتاب الصواعق alludes to a work written by Ibn Hadjar (بن حجر) which has for its title “The burning Thunderbolts” الصواعق المحرمة—Ibn Hadjar is an author much esteemed among the Olemas of Cairo; several of his works on the Hadyth or Tradition (especially his Annotations to Kastellany’s Commentary on the Hadyth,) serve as guides in the lectures delivered at the Mosque el Azhar.

596.

لا يسقط من كفه الخردل

Not a single grain of mustard seed falls from his hands.

Said of the care with which a miller watches his property. Mustard seed is extremely small.

597.

لا تؤخر على اليوم لغد

Do not put off the work of this day till to-morrow.

“to defer,” “put back,” &c.
ARABIC PROVERBS.

598.*
لا تمس الإمير إذا غشى الوزير

Do not trust the emir if his vizir cheat thee.

599.
لا تلد النعية الآ حوية

The serpent brings forth nothing but a little serpent.

600.
لا يشكر الله مَن لا يشكر الناس

Who gives not thanks to men, gives not thanks to God.

601.*
لا تسخر بكوسَم ما لم يلتص

Do not ridicule the short and thin-bearded, as long as thou thyself art without a beard.

For the Egyptians more frequently say كوسَم. In the ma stands for زمان ما لم, or طول ما.

602.*
لا يفزع البازي مِن صياح الكركي

The hawk is not frightened by the cries of the crane.

It is not size that imparts courage or strength. البازي is a species of buzzard common in Egypt and the car. see No. 3.
603.
لا يجد في السماء مصعدا ولا في الأرض مفعدا
He finds no ascent to heaven and no seat on earth.
Said of one so perplexed and embarrassed that he knows not where to turn.

604.
من دق الباب سمع التحواب
Who knocks at the door will hear the answer.

605.
ما كل ما يعله يقال
All that is known is not told.

606.
مصايب تقوم عند قوم فوايد
The misfortunes of some people are advantages to others.
607. *

ما الحزينه النكلي كانبيحة بكراها

The afflicted mother who has lost her children is not like the woman who weeps for hire.

For the Egyptians now use the word نادبة to express those hired "pleureuses," or mourners.

608.

ما يعرف في السماء إلا سهيل

He does not know in the heavens any thing but Sirius.

He knows only the most conspicuous part of heaven. A saying applied to persons little versed in the details of business.

609.

ماجرون و عطي دستور

A fool—and free license was allowed.

The word دستور in Arabic has two significations. It means, as here, the liberty granted to a person who is high in favour to do whatever he pleases, a circumstance usually the case with Turkish governors' favourites. It is also used as an exclamation on entering the houses of strangers, and passing by the places occupied by women, that they may be warned to retire; it then is equivalent to "with your leave," or "take care;" and in this sense it is frequently employed.
ARABIC PROVERBS.

610.*
ما كل وجه يقال له مرحبا

Not to every face is said “Welcome.”

In Egypt مرحبا implies “welcome.” In the Hedjáz it means “you are welcome to it,” or “I am ready for it,” and is the usual reply given by servants when commanded to do any thing by their masters. In Egypt the servant says on that occasion حاضر “I am ready.”

611.
ما للجنازة حامية قال كل انسان ييكي علي حاله

“Why is the funeral so hot?” One answered, “Every person weeps for his own (unhappy) state.”

ما للجنازة is here used in the same manner as ما لك (see No. 520,) and signifies “what is the matter with the funeral,” &c. A burial or funeral is said to be حامية hot, or warm, when crowds of mourners attend it, crying loudly. The women on those occasions wave their handkerchiefs with both hands over their heads, and following the bier, sing the praises of the deceased, whom, whether male or female, they celebrate chiefly for beauty or finery:—
“What a beautiful turban he had!” “What a lovely person she was!” “What a fine veil she wore!”
612.
ما يعرف حز المحمم إلا من دخلها
He alone knows the heat of the bath who has entered it.

613.
ما يفسح حق و خلفه مطالب
No right is lost which is followed up by demands.

614.
ما يبقى على المدارد إلا شر البقر
The bad cows only remain at the mangers.

Said of those who continue as burthens on their families or friends. The good cows are either sold or employed in the field. مدارد is the plural of مدار "a manger."

615.
ما كل من نفخت طبخت
It is not every woman who blows (the fire) that cooks also.

It may likewise mean "not every woman who puffs herself up or assumes airs;" for the word ينفخ may be used figuratively in Arabic as in English.

616.
ما كل مصوور الرقبة جمل
Every thing crooked-necked is not a camel.
617.
ما كل جي يدخل القدية

It is not every spirit that enters the glass bottle.

We cannot persuade or compel every person to serve our purposes. Sorcerers who pretend to confine hostile or familiar spirits in a glass bottle (قنينه) are as well known in the East as in Europe.

618.
ما تم فولة مسومة إلا لها كيال اعور

No worm-eaten bean remains without finding a half-blind measurer.

Every bad thing finds something equally bad to match it. The word تم is frequently used in the sense here expressed, as تم تاعد "he remained sitting;" تم يشتم حني "he continued railing or abusing until—"

619.
من حسن لفظها بعدها تخطب

On account of her fine talking they sent her to woo (for a friend).

Said ironically of a woman who spoke in a mean or vulgar manner. اعت بعث according to the Egyptian dialect for اعت

620.
من استحي من بنت له ما خاب منها غلام

He who is bashful with his cousin, gets no boy by her.

This saying is often addressed to a friend whom we entreat to render us some service, or to pay a debt. If we are ashamed, or act bashfully with him, we obtain nothing from him. It is a general custom in the Levant to marry the first cousin, and here this name stands for “wife.” Cousins thus married continue to call each other “cousins,” even after the marriage, and not “husband and wife;” because the tie of first-cousinship is universally regarded as more sacred than that of matrimony, which may be, and is frequently, dissolved at the momentary caprice of either party. Thus the man calls his wife in the house يا بنت عمي “O daughter of my uncle;” and the wife says to her husband يا ابن عمي “O son of my uncle.”

621.

ْشَهِيِّ دَيْرِك العرب يا كل خرا و يدَن لله

He is like the cocks of the Bedouins, eating dung and calling to prayers gratis.

Said of one who is left, notwithstanding all his services, to live in poverty and contempt. The cock is likened to the muezzin, because he crows at the time of morning prayers when the muezzin calls the people to their devotions. يَدَن is the Egyptian pronunciation of يونس The phrase “for God’s sake,” or “gratis,” is expressed by الله The Bedouins (here designated by the word Arab, have no criers or muezzins but their cocks.
622.
ما صَحِّت البقرة آلة للقاضي

None got the cow but the kâdhy.

The arbitrator himself seized upon the object of dispute. صَحِّت is an expression frequently used, meaning “thou hast luckily gotten it,” “it was exactly what thou shouldst have had,” “it fell appropriately to thy lot.” كَبِرَ (from the verb كَبِرَ) originally signifies “it is perfect for thee.”

623.
مَمَرْ يَوْمِ اِلْحَمْمِ وَابْوَةٌ الْبَارِدَة مَنِ اِنْتَجِيَ الْعَانِيَةَ

To him whose mother is the hot fever, and whose father is the cold fever, from whence can health come?

Children suffer from the discordant tempers of their parents. تَنْجُيَهُ in the Egyptian dialect for تَنْجِيَ لَهُ 624.

ما يَخْرُجَا الْرِّيْت آلا العصر

No one extracts the oil but the oil-presser.

To every sort of labour its own particular workman. المعَصرَة is the person who works at the المعصر or oil-mill.

625.
مَمَرْ خَلََّفُ مَا مات

He who leaves (the fame of good or great works) after him, does not die.
626.

A covered dish and a handmaid for a farthing's worth of sprats.

The construction is the copper cover placed over the most choice dishes in setting them before the guests. The female slave is here supposed to bring one of those dishes into the room, a great honour conferred upon the company and upon the dish she carries, because female slaves attend only on extraordinary occasions. The small fishes called very much resemble sprats of from two to four inches long; they are found in the tanks and ponds of Egypt after the inundation subsides. In these ponds the fish of the Nile deposit their spawn; and when the river sinks, the fishermen stop up the communication between it and the ponds until the water becomes so shallow that they can take the young fry in immense quantities, by means of wicker baskets dragged along the bottom. In order to feed the young fish, or bisarye, they throw oil-cakes called bokma (بُكِّم) (made of the dregs of hemp oil,) into the ponds, and this fattens them in a short time. At present the government has declared the whole fishery a public concern, and lets it out to several companies. In November and December the bisarye form one of the principal dishes of the middling classes at Cairo, and one pennyworth of them is sufficient to satisfy a person. The original name of the bisarye, as I have heard, is زراراتي Of the جديد (an ancient copper coin of Egypt) few now remain, they being no longer current; ten of them were equal to one para. The preposition علي is put here for لَأَفَّل and in this sense is often used; thus in the common question "for what?" or "what for?" علي أي لَأَفَّل سَبَب or ليَلَأَفَّل stands for لَأَفَّل

627.

ما بقي يعوز من النَّقل الآ الزمر

He wants of dried fruits only the zarour.

Said of unreasonable demands. The بقي is here a superfluous particle, as already noticed. (See No. 263. النَّقل are “dried fruits” (and النَّقل “the seller of dried fruits”). Zarour is a small fruit resembling a cherry in size, and an apple in taste and colour. It grows upon a low thorny shrub in different parts of Syria, where I have seen it, especially in the Valley of the Jordan. I believe that it is not a native of Egypt, and it is rarely to be found in the shops of those Damascus people who sell dried fruits at Cairo.

628.

ما قدر على حماته قام لمسانده

He was not a match for his mother-in-law—he then rose against his wife.

Finding the actual enemy too powerful, he attacks the weak and innocent. In the Egyptian dialect انا اتدر عليه signifies "I am quite a match (or an overmatch) for him." ما اتدر عليه "I am not a match for him." Instead of علي امرنته we find علي امرته—according to the practice before mentioned of putting the ل for علي—and vice versa.

629.
ما كفي الميت موته حتي عصره القدر

_Dead was not sufficient for the dead, the grave moreover must press upon him._

It is believed by Mohammedans that the tomb presses upon the body therein deposited either lightly or heavily according to the sins or merits of the deceased. This saying therefore means "not only was he punished for his sins by death, but the very tomb pressed upon him." Here حتي means "moreover," or "even,"—having no reference to time. Thus it is said شتمه حتي ضربه "he abused him and even (or moreover) struck him."

630.
ما تتم التحيلة الا علي الشطار

_The fraud is not complete unless it be practised upon clever and cunning persons._

شطار is the plural of "able," "active," and also "knowing and expert in business."
631.

ما يدخل الدرهم الزغل الآ علي الصيرفي الزكي

False coin is passed upon none but the shrewd banker.

The over-shrewd are most easily cheated. بدخل عليه "it enters upon him;" that is, "it is passed upon him." The money-changers صيرفي in Egypt are mostly Jews. In Syria, especially at Aleppo, these seyrafs, or bankers, are depositories of the cash of all the wealthy merchants. Each has in his shop a kind of Giro-bank, where sums of money are paid and received by his transferring them from one account book to another. This system much facilitates payments, and is conducted with sufficient security.

632.

مثل العتال الميشوم ما يذكر الله آتختتحمل

(He is) like the perverse porter who calls upon God only when he is under the load.

He never thinks of God but when he is suffering from misfortune. The porters are accustomed to exclaim at every step while they carry heavy burdens, "O God! O God!" يا الله يا الله A porter or the carrier of a load is called in Egypt عتال also شنال or جال 633.

"Which dost thou most love of thy children?" "That one," he replied, "whose mother's conduct I most strictly watch."

The father loves most that child of whose mother's fidelity he does not entertain a doubt. It must be recollected that in consequence of a plurality of wives the children of different beds are often found in one man's house. The Arabic scholar will easily perceive that the latter part of this proverb would not decently bear a literal translation.

634.

Thou didst not visit me, and thou art my neighbour, (and) comest from Cairo upon my jackass.

Said of a person deficient in polite attentions towards those who had a right to expect them from him.

635.

The death of the wife is the renewal of the wedding.

Here is an allusion to the custom of taking a new wife immediately on the death of a former. So universally is this practised, that no blame whatever is attached to a man or woman who remarry—the former in the next fortnight, the latter after the stipulated term of forty days, from the death of their partners.

636.
من صير نفسه خالله البقر

Him who makes chaff of himself, the cows will eat.

He who does not support his own dignity will be slighted and ill-treated. No Levantine will read this sentence without exclaiming "El hamdoo l illahy!" "Thanks be to God! that is not my foible!"

637.
من غاب غاب نصيبه

He who absents himself loses his share (or his share absents itself).

That thou mayst prosper, attend to thy task. نصيب "the lot bestowed by fate," also "a share or portion."

638.
ميزين فتح بآخر استفتح

A barber opened (his shop)—the first person whom he shaved was scald-headed.

Said of business commenced inauspiciously. مزين "a barber," the same as حلق —after نفح is understood كانه "he opened his shop." In the Egyptian dialect استفتح is for "to begin with;" and the word is generally used by shopkeepers to express the first sale they make in the morning. Thus they say, “I sold it cheap to you, that I might begin (this day’s sale) with a goodly work.”

انّا بعده لکم رخصس حتی استفّع تخير

639.
مفسوس و مراهي ما اختلفوا

A bankrupt and an usurer do not disagree.

They easily conclude a bargain.

640.†
من طبخ شيء ردي يأكل منه

He who cooks a bad thing, eats of it.

The promoter or contriver of a bad affair suffers from it.

641.*
من هي عويشة في سوق الغزل

Who is Oweyshe in the market of the cotton-yarn?

A person great or famous in his own immediate neighbourhood, is lost when he enters the crowd upon the stage of this world. عويشة is a diminutive of عيّشة a woman’s name. The diminutive is often applied to the names of children who are favourites with their parents or acquaintances. Every morning, just after sunrise, the women of the lower classes at Cairo take the cotton-yarn, which they have spun at home, for sale to certain bâzârs (سوق النزل), where of course there are great crowds of women, and where Oweyshe, however eminent in her own quarter, is not distinguished from the others. The sale of this yarn is one of the few means by which females can earn an honest livelihood at Cairo, and an industrious woman may support herself by spinning.

642.
من رادك زيه و من طلب بعدك زيه
Who likes thee, like him; and who wishes thee at a distance, wish him at a still greater distance.

زيده literally "give him more." Here is to be understood زيده في طلب البعد Of a similar meaning is the following proverbial saying:
من اقتك فوته ولا لك فبلغح حاجه و من باكك بدينار بيعه ببيضة دجاجة
Who abandons thee, abandon him, for surely thou hast no occasion to meet him; and who sold thee for a dinár, sell him for a hen's egg.

The Egyptians say راد راد in the same sense as لان يездاني يحب—thus, "such a one likes me," or "is fond of me."

643.
من لا يستحي يعمل ما يشهي
He who is not ashamed does whatever he likes.
644.*

مَن عاشُ قومًا أربعون صبح صار منهم

He who intimately frequents people for forty days, has become one of their number.

صباح is often used instead of يوم

645.

ما يصعب الحق آلا علي الاستحقي

Truth becomes disagreeable to the fool only.

646.

مَن اكل وحدة غص وحدة

He who eats alone, coughs alone.

The egotist or selfish miser is abandoned in his misfortunes. غَصٌّ to cough with the throat crammed, or when one has been almost suffocated by something sticking in the windpipe. It is reckoned a shame in the East to eat alone, and those who do so are despised as misers.

647.

ما هذا بيت الفرس

This is not the bishop’s square.

This is not the proper place for a person. A saying derived from the chess-board, where the square is called بيت or “house.” 648.

ماشطة و تمشط بنها

A hair dresser, and she combs (or dresses the hair of) her daughter.

This is said of good work, such as is executed by skilful artists when they work “con amore.” ماشطة among the peasants signifies “a woman who earns her livelihood by combing and cleaning the long thick hair of the female villagers, which she afterwards plaits,” an operation to which all the respectable Turkish women submit at least once in every week. This business is performed in towns at the baths by professional women called بانة.

649.

ما أكثر خطابي وما اقل فراشي

How very great is the number of my wooers; but how small the quantity of my furniture.

A pretty girl, but too poor to obtain a husband. الفراش comprises the whole furniture—beds, sofas, kitchen utensils, china-ware, &c. which a wife brings to her husband, amounting often to a greater value than the price paid for the girl to her father. She retains, however, the property of this furniture, unless she demands a divorce, when the husband may claim it on her leaving his house.
650
ما حد ينفرق روحه
Nobody considers himself as contemptible.
In the Egyptian dialect حد is used for حد—and commonly for نفسه روحه

651.
من تكلم في ما لا يعنى سيع ما لا يرضيه
He who talks about that which does not concern him, will hear something not pleasing to him.

652.*
ما علي القلوب درب
How many are the roads that lead not to the heart!
يا ما

653.
ما في الفاخرة مثله
Among the pottery there is none like him.
He is distinguished only among his low companions.

654.
من لا يصل للعنقود يقول عليه حامض
He who cannot reach to the bunch of grapes, says of it, “It is sour.”
655.

He who distributes bran in alms, for him it is written in the Book of Destiny that he is to receive a puff of wind upon the serât.

The serât is that narrow bridge by which the Moslims pass over the precipice of Hell towards the avenues of Paradise.

656.

Of him who marries in the bird-market, the divorce will be (as quick as one can say) "good night."

Women of the lower class and of unchaste character sell pigeons and other birds in the different bâzârs of Cairo. Here is to be understood كأن طالِه كفلَن تَمسَوا بالتخير That a person went off in haste, قال تمسوا بالتخير و راح "he said 'good evening,' and went away." In the East on quitting a company it is not usual to make long adieus; a man says merely "good night," or "good morning," and immediately withdraws. The proverb may perhaps also mean, that if the person marries in the morning at the bird-market he will be divorced on the evening of the same day.
657.
From the beginning of the vinegar dregs were in it
The affair was badly concerted from the first in the Egyptian dialect signifies "dregs or lees," the same as عكر

658.
(He is) like the world; no confidence is to be placed in him.

659.
As the sheep does with the acacia-pulse, the acacia-pulse does with the sheep's skin.
The fruit of the mimosa called صنط or سنبط consisting of a small pulse or pod resembling that of carobs. It contains several beans, and when fresh is excellent food for cattle; when dried it is used by the tanners in Upper Egypt and all the Bedouins of Arabia to tan sheep's skins.

660.
It is written upon the cucumber leaf, "He who watches during the night sleeps during the day."
He who passes the night in revelry is unfit for business during the day. "It is written upon the cucumber leaf," signifies that it is written where even the meanest people may read it, as cucumbers are very cheap and common in Egypt. الليل and النهار are here put for الليل والنهار In this manner the Egyptians frequently dispense with the prepositions في and في.

661.

ما في جهنم مراوح

There are no fans in hell.

Mراحه the plural of مراحة "a fan made of the chips of date-leaves."

662.

مس فاته اللحم فليأكل من المرق

He who loses an opportunity of (eating) the meat, let him feed on the broth.

An Arabian story relates that the bird kombar (بقر of the lark species,) once invited King Solomon to dine, and requested that all his courtiers might accompany him. The king inquired whether there was a sufficient supply of food for so large a company; and received in answer, that everything necessary had been provided. The guests arrived and seated themselves near the banks of a river; when dinner time approached the kombar came flying with a locust in his bill. Having eaten some of it himself, he threw the rest into the water, and addressed this proverb to his royal guest, advising him to satiate himself with the locust-broth. The wise monarch smiled, he and his attendants drank some of the water, thanked their host, and departed.

663.

سَنْ كَلَمَ الْزَّطْيِ علَيْ نفسِه يَخَطَّي

He who talks with the Zotty commits a sin against himself.

Avoid the conversation of unmannery persons. an Arabian tribe noted for the coarseness of their manners. I have heard at Cairo, (but cannot affirm as fact,) that a small tribe of Zotty is still established in some villages of Palestine.

664.*

ما بقي بعد عبادان قرية

After Abbádán no village remains (or exists).

This is said in derision of the praises which people so lavishly bestow upon their native places, even the most miserable hamlets. Abbádán (عرّابان) was a place on the eastern bank of the Tigris, belonging to the district of Sowád. I am ignorant whether Abbádán exists at present or not; nor can I imagine why the Egyptians should have introduced it into one of their proverbial sayings. قرية signifies a village in the modern dialect of Egypt.
ARABIC PROVERBS.

665.
ما في المعدة الواحد لله

There is not in the ferry boat any (gratis or) for God's sake.

There every person must pay his fare. الله is used in the same manner as the expression "for God's sake," i.e. gratis.

666.
ما يملأ عين ادم الا التراب

The dust alone can fill the eye of man.

Man continues to be ambitious or covetous until he is deposited in the dust. Common expressions are عينه مليان (عينه مليان "his eye is full," or "he possesses every object of his desire, he is satiated; "دا ما يملأ عينه "this does not fill his eye," or content him. This figurative sense is restored in the proverb to the real meaning of "to fill the eye." تراب the "dust of the grave." A saying of Mohammed resembling this proverb in sense is recorded as follows:—

لا يملأ جوف بن ادم الا التراب

667.*
مَن له رأس عدد الرُّؤس ما ينام الليل

He who has a head at the sellers of sheep's heads, does not sleep at night.

The person whose fortune is intrusted to the hands of strangers, cannot enjoy repose. The poor at Cairo buy sheep's heads and for a trifle have them boiled in the bazar by persons who are not only cooks, but sellers of sheep's heads, and therefore called رأس or in the Egyptian dialect رأس.

668.

من لا تأكل في فرحه كله في عزاء

Of that person at whose wedding thou dost not eat, eat at the funeral.

Lose no opportunity of gaining from a stingy person. The more natural construction of this proverb would be

الذي لا تأكل اكلًا في فرحه كله في عزاء

The word عزاء means the first days of mourning after a person's death, generally spent by his relations in loud expressions of grief; sumptuous entertainments being given to the mourners. Instead of the Egyptians say also ميمت which is a corruption of ماتم.

669.

من تعب استراح

He who is fatigued shall repose (afterwards).

is the expression used in inviting a person to sit down when he enters a room, as the Arabs say اجلس.
670.
ما لي بقر ولا قوم سحرة
I have no cows, nor do I set myself up as a sorcerer.

I have no money left to assist thee (or to supply the want of thy lost cow). اتوم “I rise” (to do or to be), “I suddenly begin to be.”

671.
من لا يرضىبحكم موسى رضي الله علیه
He who is not satisfied with the government of Moses, will be satisfied with the government of Pharaoh.

This saying has latterly been often quoted to express that those who did not like the Mamelouks, must now submit to the still more tyrannical government of Mohammed Aly. The construction is according to the vulgar dialect of Cairo, it should have been (more correctly)
من لم يرضىبحكم موسى يرضي بهحكم فرعون

672.
ما هو إلا النار الملحم
It is nothing but the fire of the Magians.

Said to a person who highly values that which finally must hurt him. The Madjous, or Idolaters, adore the same element which burns them.
673.*

He who does not taste the (best part of the) meat likes the lungs.

The poor must be content with that which the rich disdains. The lungs are eaten only by the poor. Instead of رية the Egyptians more commonly use the term نَشْتة in speaking of lungs.

674.

Of him whose cook is a beetle, what may not be the dishes?

What can the work be if slovenly fools are employed to execute it? أبو جعران is the largest species of خنفساء or scarabæus, and cited, like the latter, as an emblem of ugliness and filth. It is the same animal which the learned Arabians sometimes call جعل.

675.

He who eats a hen of the sultan will return her to him a cow.

On the heavy fines imposed on those who embezzle the public money، اكل is constantly used to imply “the taking of illegal gain.” Thus اكل مني “he has cheated me,” اكل من الفلوس “he has eaten (embezzled) some of the money.” But it always supposes that the eater has betrayed at the same time the trust or confidence placed in him. Therefore it is not said of a shopkeeper who cheats his customer by overcharges —“he cheated him;” but if my servant overcharges me in an account of my expenses, I say “he has cheated me.”

676.*
من لا يصلحه الخير لا يصلحه الشر

Him whom goodness cannot mend, evil will not mend.

On such incorrigible persons as cannot be softened by kindness nor corrected by punishment. On this subject the following verse is cited:

إذا كان الطباع طابع سوء
فلا أدب يفيد ولا أديب

677.
من احب شيء أكثر من ذكره

He who loves a thing often talks of it.

Literally “abounds in the mentioning of it.”

678.
من يقدر علي رد امس وطبيين عين الشمس

Who is able to restore (what was) yesterday, or to plaster over the rays of the sun?

One is as impossible as the other. This is generally said of any undertaking quite beyond the reach of human power. (from طين) to cover a wall or anything with mud, plaster, &c.

679.
من العباجراب اعنى كحال

Among wonderful things is a sore-eyed person who is an oculist.

A man should first attend to his own defects. In Egypt those quacks are styled كحال who pretend to cure the eyes, for which purpose they usually employ a mixture of mineral or metallic substances, especially antimony, and from this they derive their name.

680.
ما الرجل الا بدرهميه

Man is only man by his money.

This vile saying is in opposition to the celebrated answer given to the great Arab chief, or King of Hyra, Noman Ibn Monzer, by his enemy and rival Dhamra Ibn Dhamra, whom Noman when he came into his presence reproached for the meanness of his look and the smallness of his person. The noble Bedouin replied, "Surely the worth of a man lies in two of his smallest parts—his heart and his tongue!"

انها الرجل باصغريه قلبه و لسانه

Others affirm that this answer was given by the Arab Mady Kerb to the King of Persia.
681.

مَّتِى انْفِرْزَنتُ يا بيدق

When wert thou changed into a queen, O pawn?

Said of low people suddenly elevated. This is taken from the chess board, when a pawn passes to queen (نرخ). The ١ of انفرزنتُ is superfluous, and must be ascribed merely to the vulgar pronunciation. The ancient poet Abou Tamam has a similar expression:

نُرَزْنِم سِرُقة مَا أري يا بيدق

682.*

من اكل مرهق السلطان احترقت شفته و لو بعد حين

Of him who eats the sultan’s broth, the lips will be scalded, should it be even at a very distant time.

On the dangers attending those who accept lucrative situations under Eastern rulers. The اكل is here in its true sense and implies "illegal eating," or "gain." مرهق السلطان stands for من مرهق Thus it is said "I ate of his bread," as if من اللحم preceded عيشه or as a host says to his guest, "eat of the meat," for كل من اللحم 683.

A small date-stone props up the water-jar.

Great princes often owe their security to the meanest of their subjects; or, great concerns are supported by the most trifling circumstances. نواية is the diminutive of نوي That the large water-jars, which are of this form—— may be kept in an upright position and well balanced, some small stones are often put under them.

684.

The adviser of the fool is (or becomes) his enemy.

The word احذى is applied in Egypt not only to a fool, but also to an obstinate headstrong person.
They embraced her, she remained silent; they reproached her, then she assumed airs.

She dreads the reproach, but is not ashamed of the deed. "to enjoy female society." which signifies "the twisting of the body and coy motions of a woman impatient of reproach." The same word is often used to express similar motions produced by coquetry or voluptuousness, and the women of Cairo flatter themselves that their is superior to that of all other females in the Levant.

The blowing of the stable.

This is said on two occasions; first, when a person resembles a horse that issues from his stable in full vigour, snorts and breathes high, blows out at the nostrils, and strikes the ground with his hoofs, but soon after is found to be tired; secondly, it is applied to a person resembling the grooms of the stable, who puff themselves up and give themselves great airs, fellows noted in Egypt for their insolence.
687.
نار العلفا سريعة الانطفأ

The fire of reeds is of rapid extinction.

The passions of those who have no energy of character are easily subdued.

688.*
نُشا مع نوح في السفينة

He was born with Noah in the ark.

Of ancient origin, of long standing.

689.*
الإنسان عبد الانحسان

Man is the slave of beneficence.

Beneficent actions and kindnesses enslave a man to the generous.

690.
نزلت منه بواعي غير ذي زرع

I alighted (at his house) in a barren valley.

Said of an inhospitable mansion, in allusion to a passage of the Koran (Chapter xiv), wherein it is said

ربّنا اني اسكنيت من ذرتي بواعي غير ذي زرع

by which valley is understood the valley of Mekka. He stands here for or فيه عندده—these prepositions being in common conversation frequently misused one for the other.
691.

Advice given in the midst of a crowd is loathsome.

Advice given in the midst of a crowded place (with people). In the Egyptian dialect "loathsomeness," "disgust," &c. This meaning is well expressed by an ancient poet, as follows:

و إذا وجدت علي الصديق شكوته سراً و في المجامل اشتك

If I should find my friend in the wrong, I reproach him secretly; but in presence of company, I praise him.

692.

People resemble still more the time in which they——live, than they resemble their fathers. (Verbatim—Men, with their time, are more similar to it, than to their fathers.)

This proverb means, that the general state of society, its notions and manners, have more influence upon man than education or the example set by his parents. A maxim equally just as sagacious. It might have been expressed more precisely in Arabic thus—

شبه الناس بزمانهم أكثر من مشابهاتهم لابائهم
693.
النَّاي في كمي و الريح في نمي

The clarionet is in my sleeve and the breath in my mouth (ready for playing).

Used to express "I am completely ready for business." نَّاي is a sort of clarionet very common in the Levant.

694.
نظر الشححج الي الغريم المفلس

(Like) the look of the miser at his bankrupt debtor.

695.
هدايا الاحباب علي ورق السداب

The presents of our friends are (as dear to us as if they were) upon the leaves of rue.

It is well known that presents are frequently interchanged between friends in the East. A thing is generally presented wrapped in a handkerchief, or placed on the leaves of some fragrant herbs or flowers. سداب is the plant rue, a favourite among the Turks and Arabs, whose drawing-rooms often contain it in pots. It is likewise called سِندَاب.
Here we must understand کانه عالي ورق.

696.

هارب و يهلل

He is running away, yet shouts loudly.

Instead of endeavouring to facilitate his escape by silence, he attracts notice by crying with a loud voice. For يسرخ يهلل it is more usual to say يصرخ.

697.

هات اليوم موف و خذ غدا نعال

Give me wool to-day, and take sheep to-morrow.

Applicable to those who give small presents hoping to receive some more valuable in return. This is almost universally the case where a Levantine makes a present to an European.

698.

هيته عاليه و بطنه خاليه

He is high-minded, but empty-bellied.

699.*

هو قدر اثر و يشغيل السر

It is not larger than a button, yet it annoys us.

The merest trifles may cause vexation and pain.
is a silk button which fastens the gown about the neck.

\[\text{is the innermost, the secret, the mind, the secret intention.}\]

“it distresses and occupies our inmost thoughts, it vexes us;” so this expression is frequently used. Of the same sense is

\[\text{We hear also he is vexed. “do not vex me.”}\]

700.

هو طبل تخت كسا

Is this a drum hidden under the clothing?

The drum will be heard although it may be hidden. The question means, “Do you suppose that so awkward an attempt to conceal this mystery can hide it from the public?”

701.

\[\text{Musk became so common and was scattered about, so that even the cows used it.}\]

Said of a precious thing used by mean people; or of a distinguished personage connected with those unworthy of his acquaintance.

702.

هو وجهك يا حزينة في الحلي و الزيئة

It is thy face, O woman in grief, when ornamented and attired.

A reproof to an ugly woman angry at her face and endeavouring to deck it with ornaments. This saying is applied to all vain attempts at concealing natural deformities or bad qualities. حلي means "the jewels or gold and silver ornaments of the the head or neck." الزينة "whatever is used at a woman's toilett for the purpose of personal decoration;" such as the kohel for her eyes, the henna for her fingers, the perfume for her hair, &c.

703.
هي صنعة بعفافير

Is this an art of drugs?

Is it as difficult as the profession of a druggist? This is said to imply that it is as a matter of which the knowledge may be easily acquired. عفافير in the Egyptian dialect signifies all the different drugs, spices, simples, &c., which are found in druggists' shops, and which cannot well be distinguished one from another without much skill and patience.

704.*
هو سم ساعة

It is an hour's poison.

It is of a very destructive quality, causing almost immediate ruin.
705.
هي مونة سنة

Is this provision for a year?
Said in advising a person not to squander away his little stock of provisions, and to regulate his expenses.

706.*
هذا الميت لا يساوي البكا

This dead (person) is not worth the weeping.

707.
اهتك ستور الشك بالسؤال

Tear off the curtain of doubt by questions.
Doubt is here personified as a veil or curtain with which virgin truth or knowledge is covered. In its original sense هتك signifies to remove the veil of a woman so that her face may be exposed. Hence are derived the other significations, disgracing and violating, certain consequences in the East attending the removal of a woman’s veil by force.
708.*
°بصل القطار للجميزه

_The camels have reached the sycamore tree._

is a line of camels walking one behind another, each being fastened by its halter to the tail of the one immediately before him. In the open country of Egypt large sycamore trees are frequently found by the side of public fountains (سيل), under the shade of which travellers and cattle often repose.

709.*
°وصل السكين للعظم

_The knife has reached the bone._

The wound is deep.

710.
°وقف الباب علي عقبه

_The door has rested upon its hinges._

Everything has been placed in its proper situation.
711.

The axe has fallen upon the head.

The blow was well directed.

712.

A small leaf, and it was wetted.

A poor little creature, and overwhelmed by misfortune.

713.

One shaved his beard, a second plucked out his hairs; every one, they said, according to his own liking.

The abridged phrase is often used in the same sense as "de gustibus non est disputandum." It stands for — to express it clearly we should say, Respect- ing the true meaning of see No. 202. Whenever the word beard is mentioned in the same phrase with a term expressing some object dirty or contemptible, it always implies disrespect or ridicule towards the owner of the beard, this appendage so venerated among the Arabs. Indeed they carry their scruples respecting it to such a degree that when a person relates a story or sings a song in which occur the words dung, hogs, dogs, or other terms denoting what they regard as filthy or impure, he requests any of his auditors who may at that moment be in the act of touching his beard or moustaches, to remove his hand, which request proves that no offensive allusion was meant between the beard and the word which the speaker or singer was going to pronounce.

714.

A person embraces his wife; a female neighbour affects to look as if she herself were in the wife's place.

Said of a bystander who assumes the air of enjoying that which he had merely happened to witness. I have heard this proverb (which, as the Arabic scholar will perceive, is not very literally translated,) often quoted in respectable society. And there are many others still more indelicate, not inserted in this collection, although frequently used by the best-bred people, even in the presence of virtuous and most respectable women.

715.

A fine face, but eats vile things.

Alluding to a person of good appearance who commits base actions.
716.
وجوه كتّة وقوب خفة

Sour faces and deceitful hearts.

كتّة in the Egyptian dialect, "a sour, morose, ill-natured countenance," than which nothing is more disliked in the East, where a man is forgiven for being a scoundrel, but not if he seems to despise or dislike scoundrels.

717.
وحش و يكش ويفعد في لوش

Rude and morose, yet he sits in front (of the company).

He takes a place to which he is not entitled. I have before remarked that the Orientals dislike extremely a sour or morose countenance. وحش in the dialect of Egypt is seldom used to express savage or wild, but "rude in manners and appearance." يكش see No. 716. لوش so pronounced by many persons for وج. It is to be understood في وش الملائس

718.
وجه يقطع الرزق

His face cuts off all gain.

His face is so disagreeable that no one likes to deal with him.
719.

وَدَّاه البحر و جابه عطشان

He led him to the river, yet brought him back thirsty.

وردي في the Egyptian dialect means “to carry, lead, transport, bring to.”

الي البحر or الي بحر النيل

720.*

وقعت سنة اسكندرية قال الله سلما من غبارها

The Pharos of Alexandria has fallen down. “God save us,” said they, “even from the very dust of it.”

The fall of a great man is to be dreaded, even in its remote consequences or effects.

721.

واحد تَعِد يَتَمّ طلع الصبح فلما طلع الصبح عَي

A person sat demanding as a favour from God the rise of morn—when morn arose, he became blind.

We have often to lament the accomplishment of our wishes; or when they are fulfilled we cannot enjoy them. This proverb is derived from the following verse—

فَكَانَ كَلْبَتْيَنِ ان يَرَى نَفَقًا

من الصباح فلما ان رآه عَي

The verb تَعِد does not here exactly mean “he sat,” but is employed as a kind of auxiliary, signifying nothing more than كان—an العشاء—thuS, "he silent,” or “sit silent,” said to a person whether sitting or standing. “He did speak to me until”—or rather “he continued speaking to me until” — “I did love him for a long time,” or “I continued loving him for a long time.”

722.

اوته من بيت العنكبوت

More easy to be broken than the house of the spider.

This is taken from the Koran, where we read,

و ان اوهن البيت لبيت العنكبوت

723.

واحد على ثور وقع قال رشوا عليه ما قال حتي يطلع

A certain person tied an ox (to the water-wheel). The animal fell. “Sprinkle some water upon him,” (said the man). “Let us first,” replied one, “get some out of the well to sprinkle upon him.”

Said in ridicule of foolish advisers. An ox is here supposed fastened to a wheel that draws up water from a well. علف is the technical term used by peasants to express “he tied the ox (to the wheel).” حتي يطلع شي يطلع شي ما من البير
Do not add more mud to the Mobella.

Do not make an evil worse, nor add fuel to the fire. محبة is a tank sunk into the ground above four feet, and from forty to fifty feet square; it is walled up with stones and level with the surface of the ground: the floor is composed of unburnt mud bricks. In this tank the Egyptian peasants deposit their flax after it has been well dried in the sun. They then let in water and cover the wetted flax with heavy stones, leaving it in that condition until a sufficient state of maceration renders it fit for being worked. They find it necessary to keep this floor very clean, because the masses of clay would spoil the flax; hence arises the proverb. The mobella is also called معطنة—and to prepare the flax in this manner يعطن

2 L
725.

لا تقطع في كيس غيرك

Do not cut out of the purse of another.

Do not seize upon that which does not belong to thee. The people of Cairo say تقطع فولك -meaning "I have unjustly or by force taken something away from such a one." The word ضربة is used in the same sense; and they also say، لا تضرب في كيس غيرك.

726.

لا عند ربك ولا عند استاذك

It is neither (to be found) with thy God nor with thy landholder.

It is in vain to ask for the thing, no one can give it to thee. The Egyptian peasants call the landholders or proprietors of their fields by the name of استاذ. In towns those landlords are called ملزم. But at present this class does not exist in Egypt, as Mohammed Aly Pasha has sequestered all landed property of individuals, and obliged them to take from the fiscus what they formerly received as rents from their farmers.

727.

لا ارافقك ولا ارافقك ولا انارتكم

I will not be thy friend, nor will I suit thee, nor will I leave thee.

This is said of a wearisome hanger-on, who knows that he is disliked, yet perseveringly obtrudes his presence upon his acquaintances. Persons of this description are numerous in the Levant. يرافق ميتيت comes from رفيق a "companion," also a "friend." The proverb is derived from an old Arabian saying—

من البليلة صديق يرافقك ولا يوافقك ولا يفارتك

728.
لا بعينك رايت ولا بقلبك حبيت

Neither with thine eye hast thou seen, nor with thy heart hast thou loved.

Applied to one who affects violent love for a person whom he has never seen unveiled.

729.
لا تعير الاحتي شي يحسب انه له

Lend not to the fool anything, else he may fancy that it belongs to himself.

730.
لا رحم نوابه ولا خلاء لاسمحبه

He gained no merit (by spending it liberally) nor did he leave it to the right owners.

He unjustly took (the money) from another, without rendering it profitable to himself or any one else. لا رحم نوابه لا رحم الثواب في التصدق لا رحم الثواب لا رحم نوابه "he gained not the merit of having expended it in alms." 731.
لا يغرك رخصه تري يبها
Do not let its cheapness delude thee; thou wilt (if thou purchase it) throw away half of it.

According to the Egyptian pronunciation ص is used for ص although other words of the same form are correctly pronounced, such as خشف—وصف &c.

732.
لا تزال الحاجة المشومة عند صاحبها حتى ينجو ممن يشتريها

The bad stuff remains with its owner until (some fool) comes to buy it.

حاجة often means "a thing, some article of merchandise, some stuff," &c.; it is frequently synonymous with شئ الحاجة في الصندوق—thus, "put the thing into the chest." (See Nos. 34 and 378.)

733.*
لا صلح آئت بعد عداوة

There is no peace until after enmity.

734.
لا تعني في وجه الرزق يعرب
Do not cry out in the face of gain else it flies away.

This is quoted as advice to dealers, that they should behave civilly towards customers and not reject good offers harshly; otherwise the goods may remain upon their hands.

735.*
لا مليم ولا نفاق ولا طيب اخلاص

Neither handsome, nor liberal, nor good-natured.

Said of a repulsive character. نفاق one who expends money liberally.

736.*
لاتعامل بطال ولا صاحب جار

Have no dealings with the indolent, and none with the owner of the jackass.

The lazy will do nothing for thee; and the owner of the jackass will purchase food for his beast with the profits which he ought to divide with thee. معاملة signifies "trade," "commercial or pecuniary concerns." لا تجعل بسک لا تعامله و بیه معامله 737.

لا تقدّم نفس تتعب في تأخیره

Do not push forward a worthless fellow, else thou wilt be tired in putting him back again.
738.

لا تضرب الذيب ولا تجعل العنم

Do not beat the wolf, and do not cause hunger to the sheep.

Be kind and mild towards friends and enemies. This is the only maxim recommending universal charity that I have been able to discover among those current at Cairo.

739.

لا علي في الكتاب ولا فاطمة في المعلمة

(I have) neither an Aly in the reading school, nor a Fatme in the working school.

I am not encumbered with children and therefore ready for any vocation. The school كَتَاب is generally held in a mosque where little children learn to read the Korán. After four or five years they are sent to attend lectures in the mosque, where the Korán is explained, and their language and religion systematically taught, but little else. مَعْلُومة is the school where women instruct young girls in sewing and spinning. Among a thousand females at Cairo scarcely one can be found who knows how to read, and perhaps not more than twenty who know how to pray or possess the least notion of their religion. Even among the highest classes the education of the mind is totally neglected.
740.
لا تعطى الماجم في هذا فلوس

Do not give any money to the astrologer for this.

The expectations which the fortune-teller has excited in thy mind are ridiculous, and he is not entitled to any remuneration. ماجم an astrologer. Sheikhs and olemas are found in every town of Egypt, who deceive the credulous by their pretended skill in fortune-telling.

741.*
لا للسيف ولا للضيف

(A person good) neither for the sword nor for the guest.

Cowardly and stingy.

742.*
يتحمل الدواء لمنفعته

We must bear the medicine on account of its usefulness.
743.

يركب يارب و يغامز امرأة الريس

He gets his passage for nothing, and winks to the wife of the captain (of the ship).

He owes obligations to the captain, yet endeavours to seduce his wife. يركب here is to be understood يركب المركب The word يغامز signifies "to wink at," or "make mutual signals of intelligence with another person." رئس in the Egyptian dialect for رئس

744.

يوجد في السفاط مأ لا يوجد في السفاط

Among things thrown away is found (perhaps) that which is not found in the casket.

شفط a box in which jewels and golden ornaments are kept.

745.

امرق من اذرد

He slips out through the coat of mail.

He is so full of wily tricks that he would contrive to slip away through the wire-work of a coat of mail. The word امرق is seldom used in Egypt, but frequently in Syria, and in the Black country on the Nile, and in Hedjáz, where to express "be gone," (or the vulgar English "get out," اخرج is used; for which in Egypt the word اخرج is common.
746.

He swims in a span (depth) of water.

He is full of resources and knows how to avail himself of the smallest means.

747.

The gold wants bran.

The great want the assistance of the mean. Gold is cleaned with bran.

748.

O you who feed the people without while those within are (left) longing for it, sit down out of the way to eat it.

This is said in advice to those who make an ostentatious display of hospitality towards strangers, but leave their own family to starve. جوا جواب الطريق “inside,” “within.” جنب الطريق “by the side of the road where travellers pass,” viz., out of their way. Eat with your own people.

It is very usual in the Levant to eat before the gate of the house where travellers pass, and every stranger of respectable appearance is invariably requested to sit down and partake of the repast.
Even the poorest man while he is eating invites any one passing by to share his humble meal. It must be acknowledged that with respect to food, the Egyptians, and in general the Orientals of every class, are generous towards strangers as well as towards the poor. I have reason to believe that very few at Cairo suffer from hunger, at least they may be certain of getting food in some part of the town before sunset; and those who feel for their fellow creatures must be gratified on reflecting when they retire to sleep, that in this great capital there are few, if any, individuals who pass the night without thanking God for an evening meal, although poor-houses, hospitals, parish-rates, and public charitable institutions, are here unknown. This consideration counterbalances a number of disadvantages, and tends to reconcile us with the character of the inhabitants and their political condition. Beggars can easily obtain work if they like to be employed, and they neither suffer from the inclemency of seasons nor from want of lodgings; all the lower classes being from their infancy accustomed to go half-naked and to sleep upon the bare ground under the canopy of heaven.

But on the other hand, this facility of procuring food is a main cause of inactivity and indolence among the Egyptians, which would be carried still farther did not the extortions of government oblige them to work, merely that they might pay the land taxes. It is not the southern sun, as Montesquieu imagines, but the luxuriance of southern soil, and the abundance of provisions, that relax the exertions of the inhabitants and cause apathy. Where a man is almost certain of finding sufficient food, however coarse or simple, he is easily tempted to indulge in laziness. By the fertility of Egypt, Mesopotamia, and India, which yield their produce almost spontaneously, the people are lulled into indolence; while in neighbouring countries, of a temperature equally warm, as among the mountains of Yemen and Syria, where hard labour is necessary to ensure a good harvest, we find a race as superior in industry to the former, as the inhabitants of Northern Europe are to those of Spain or Italy.

749.

يَسْتَغْضِيَ عَلَى البَيْضَينِ وَ مَنْ زَرَعَهُ

He inquires about the Beshneen and the person who sowed it.

Everybody at Cairo knows the plant beshneen, and that it is not sown, but grows wild. يستغضي “to inquire,” is a verb of very common use. The beshneen is undoubtedly the lotus of the ancient Egyptians; at least its flower resembles exactly the lotus as it is represented on the walls of the Egyptian temples. The flower consists of four green-coloured outer leaves, and four of a violet or rose colour placed in the interstices of the others; these inclose the inner part, which consists of a double set of smaller white leaves one behind another, in the midst of which stands the yellow seed-vessel, about one inch and a half high. The whole flower when half opened is one of the most beautiful plants in Egypt, which is probably the reason why the natives call these plants "the brides of the Nile" عروس النيل. It rests upon a stalk which is about three feet five inches long, covered externally with a green skin, under which lies a second skin of a fine violet colour, spotted with white. The children play with this stalk, the inside of which is fibrous, and use it as a pipe-tube by placing some lighted tobacco at the place where the seed-vessel stood, the smoke of this they draw through the stalk. In their hands it closely resembles the plant which is held by the Theban priests in the pictures that decorate their temples.

They likewise eat the yellow seed-vessel, of which the taste is not disagreeable, though rather insipid. The flower generally stands on the stalk from one foot to two feet above the surface of the water. When the flower opens completely the leaves form a horizontal disk, with the isolated seed-vessel in the midst, which bends down the stalk by its weight and swims upon the surface of the water for several days, until it is ingulphed. This plant grows at Cairo in the tank called Birket el Rotoli, near one of the northern suburbs, where I happened to reside. It is not found in Upper Egypt, I believe, but abounds in the Delta, and attains maturity at the time when the Nile reaches its full height. I saw it in great abundance, and in full flower, covering the whole inundated plain on the twelfth of October, 1815, near the ruins of Tmey, about twelve miles south-east from Mansoura, on the Damietta branch. "It dies when the water retires," (يموت لما يرويه الماء) said my boatman to me.

It is therefore a fit emblem of life in all its vigour and luxuriance while it blossoms during the inundation, which is the certain cause and forerunner of plenty in Egypt. It is an emblem of death also, when quite open, as the flood then retires. Or it may be understood differently, (and I believe the Egyptians did understand it in both senses,) as indicating while in blossom that everything is covered with water, and nature, as it were, asleep; and indicating when in a state of decay that nature is restored to life, for soon after that period seeds are sown by the husbandmen—thus, inundation is life in one sense, and death in the other.

750.

ياكل و ينين

He eats and sighs.

Said of those who, in good health and prosperous circumstances, complain of sickness or murmur at fortune. ينين is used by the Egyptians for ياس "to sigh, or exclaim Ah! Ah!"
751.

يَفْتَ عَلَى الدَّخَان

He resembles the bread on (seeing only) the smoke.

He is preparing for some expected good fortune without any certainty of its occurring. يَفْتُ “to break bread into small pieces,” (over which the broth is poured to make soup). The man, therefore, is said to resemble the bread in a plate when the smoke rises from the kitchen, supposing that broth is on the fire and expecting that it will be brought to him.

I happened one day in the Sinai mountains to alight at an Arab tent. Ayd, my old Bedouin guide, as soon as he had sipped his coffee, went out in search of two large stones; these he brought back to the tent, sat down, and placed them by his side. When I asked why he had done so, it appeared that his object was to use them in breaking the bones, for the sake of the marrow, of a sheep that was (as he expected) to be slaughtered in honour of us; yet he had never received the slightest intimation that such a circumstance was intended: all present began to laugh, but Ayd had not indulged a vain speculation, for soon after a copious repast of meat was placed before us.

752.

يَتَعَلَّمُ الاحتجامة في روس البتامي

He learns cupping on the heads of orphans.

Cupping is generally applied in the East to the hind part of the head, just above the neck. Thus in some hospitals of Europe the young surgeons learn their art by practising upon the bodies of poor patients who come to be cured \textit{gratis}.

753.

Also learns the blacksmith in Kirmanshah.

\begin{quote}
\emph{He is instructed in the blacksmith's or farrier's art (or horse-doctor's) by practising upon the asses of the Kurds.}
\end{quote}

This is in opposition to the proverb immediately preceding. I know not that asses are particularly esteemed by the Kurds, but this saying means that it is silly to undertake the shoeing or curing of those animals which are reckoned valuable by their owners without an adequate knowledge of the art.

754.

A day that is not thine own, do not reckon it as of thy life.

\textit{Lek} "thine," "thy own." That day which thou dost not enjoy in perfect freedom; which thou canst not pass according to thine own will.
755.

يعشي علي الحيط و يقول بالله اسلام

He walks upon the highest part of the wall and says, “For safety we trust to God!”

He demands or expects safety yet does an act which exposes him to danger. If security be thy object do not voluntarily run into the way of danger.

756.

ينزل رجل غراب يطلع خف جمل

He descends (like) the foot of a crow, and ascends (like) the hoof of a camel.

Said of an ill-bred person affecting refined manners. In eating with the assistance of one’s fingers only out of the dish round which many guests are seated, it is necessary to observe several rules of good-breeding established among Arab gentlemen. One rule is, to take up small morsels at a time, and therefore to keep the fingers thrust into the dish as close together as circumstances will allow. This proverb is quoted in derision of an ill-bred person, whose hand, when it descends into the dish, appears very small to the company (as small as a crow’s foot), but when withdrawn from the dish and ascending towards his mouth, incloses so large a piece within its grasp that it resembles the hoof of a camel.
757.

ٍيَكَذِّبُ عَلَىُ ٱلَّمُوَنِّ وَيَكَبُرُ ٱلَّذِيْن

He tells lies of the dead and belies the living.

(From which is formed مَكَابِرٍ) means in the Egyptian dialect, to affirm boldly and falsely in a person’s face that he has done or said something of which he is innocent or ignorant; thus, مَكَابِرِيْنُ, “dost thou belie me?” or rather “dost thou state of me that which is a falsehood?”

758.

يَقْنِعُ مِنَ ٱلْمَعَاَاصِيِ بَلَٰٓ لِمُهُ

He contents himself with (incurring) the suspicion of doing evil actions.

This is said of a person who does not actually commit bad actions, but constantly exposes himself to suspicion by conversing with abandoned women, associating with drunkards, men of infamous characters, &c. المعاصي means actions contrary to divine and human laws.

759.

يَرْمُ بَيْنَ ٱلْدِّبِّ وَ ٱلْعَلِيْقَهُ

He causes enmity between the bear and his fodder.

He is such a mischief-maker that he sets at variance those who are most intimately united. يَرْمُ “to throw,” is often used in the sense above.
mentioned; as "such a person has caused mischief or enmity between us." "by calumny or false accusation he has caused such an one to become my enemy." The meddling mischief-maker bears at Cairo the appellation of 760.

ياكل ما كان و يفشي المكان

He eats whatever is there and contracts (or makes narrow) the place of others.

Said of a low-mannered person assuming the privileges of high rank. This proverb supposes a vulgar ill-bred man, voracious at an entertainment, (while the great Arabs never are so,) and pretending nevertheless to the privilege of a distinguished personage in occupying with his body as much room as possible, and thereby causing other guests to be crowded in their straightened places. يأكل ما كان stands for يأكل كل ما كان حاصراً. It is usual to say لا تنسين عليّ "do not sit too close to me," or "let me have more room."

761.*

يتجيي زمن يترحموا على فرعون

A time will come when they will solicit God’s mercy for Pharaoh.

Times are so bad that even Pharaoh is regretted.
The Egyptians often mention this sovereign, and the Turks call the inhabitants of Egypt by the opprobrious name of اهل نفرعون or the people of Pharaoh, meaning "impious." It is said of a man who has proved stubborn, malicious, or impious, تفرعَ he has become like Pharaoh.

762.

يکد علي عياله و يمين علي جيرانه

He is niggardly towards his family, but beneficent towards strangers.

يکد in the Egyptian dialect signifies "to curtail the dues of people," principally with respect to food. يقلل علي الطعام (See No. 748.)

763.

ينخرج من انشوك ورد

A rose issues from thorns.

A good son from worthless parents.

764.

ينخر في نيايه ويعد في الصدر متكي

He defiles his clothes, and sits reclined in front of the company.

Of the same signification as No. 760.
The sitting rooms in Egypt are generally on such a plan as the following outlines represent:

Entering the door we find a pavement $b$, upon which the servants stand attending the company; here the pipes and water-pots are placed. The greater portion of the room is elevated in its floor, about one foot above the pavement, and occupies the space marked $a$, on which in summer fine mats, and in winter carpets are spread. On the three sides along the walls sofas are placed even with the floor, and having numerous cushions. The sofas and divan in front of the step, or at the bottom of the room, is called "el sader," or the "breast." The sofas on both sides are called "djoub," or the "side." The place of honour is this sader, and especially the corner marked $+$, which is on the right of a person advancing towards the sader, wherein the great man of the company invariably takes his seat, reclining upon the cushions, while the rest, according to their rank, are ranged along the sides, and sit upon their hams, without reclining upon the cushions behind them; that is, if they wish to pay a compliment to the great man of the company. He therefore who takes his seat and reclines upon the sader, either is or affects to be a man of importance.

765.

O thou who troublest thyself about the cares of others, to whom hast thou left thine own cares?

in the Cairo pronunciation for لِمَن 766.

He longs for war, but dislikes the battle.

the meeting (of the enemy) or battle.

767.*

O thou who askest me about my food, (know that) bread is the chief of all things.

Another verse of similar meaning is quoted—

These lines are pronounced at Cairo as follows—

El kōmbar kall lil kīky
Ma ahlattyn arrīky
Kallow tāddeb yd kōmbar
Ma ād el aysh mokhabbar.
The kombar said to the kyky, "How sweet is a fig for breakfast!"

"Learn better manners, O kombar," he replied, "after bread nothing deserves notice."

The kombar and kyky are birds about as large as sparrows, and numerous in the vicinity of Cairo. علي الريحان means that state of the stomach in the morning when nothing has been swallowed except spittle, when the person is still "upon his spittle," i.e. with an empty stomach. اليدين على الريحان means "a fig upon the empty stomach," or "a fig for breakfast." The Egyptians say يفتق الريحان "to breakfast," or "to eat a morsel immediately rising from bed;" which the Syrians express by يكسر الصفرة "to break the phlegm, or the bile, (by eating) or to breakfast." ما كسرت الصفرة "I have not yet breakfasted." The word مخير has here the sense which I have assigned to it in the above translation of the proverb; I believe it stands for مخير—as neither مخير nor مخير literally explained, convey in this place any true sense.

768.

On the day of victory no fatigue is felt.
769.*

ينصّ نصم القط للفار و الشيطان للإنسان

He gives advice such as the cat gives to the mouse, or the devil to man.

Alluding to insidious advice.

770.

يبني قصرًا و يهدم مصرًا

He builds a palace and ruins a city.

This proverb is often quoted in allusion to Mohammed Aly Pasha's passion for building palaces and villas. مصر not only means Egypt or Cairo, but is also a name applied to all cities of considerable size. Thus we read in the Mohammedan law that the Friday prayer should be performed only in a city (في مصر), in opposition to the open country, of which the inhabitants, as well as all travellers, are not required to make the particular prayer of noon on Fridays. The commentators explain this term مصر as relating to any town or city governed by an emir or chief, and under the jurisdiction of a kadhy, or some head of a tribunal of justice.

771.

يقدم رجلًا و يوخر اخري

He advances one leg and draws back the other.

He wants decision and is unstable in all his actions.
772.

ْيَلِامِعُ الفَلْسِ في بَيْهٍ

The mouse is bridled in his house.

Said of a miser in whose house even the mouse has been bridled, lest it should be able to eat anything.

773.

يا وَلاَيَّ لَا تَجْحِرَ الْوَلَايَةَ لَا تَدْوِمَ

O governor do not tyrannize—the dominion does not last for ever.

774.

يُسْمِيُّ تَسْبِيحَ الفَلْسِ سَبِيحَ مَنْ خَلَقْتِهِ لِلْفَسَادِ

He prays upon his rosary the prayer of the mouse, “O most holy, who hast created me for vile doings.”

Said of base hypocrites who are constantly seen with rosaries in their hands. The word سبِيحان is repeated during prayer thirty-three times in passing so many beads through the fingers, and expresses that God is free from all defects or faults, and most pure and holy.
775.

He strikes my face, and says "Why does this man cry?"
On the unjust ruler, who expresses surprise at the complaints of his subjects.

776.

He says to the thief, "Steal;" and to the house-owner, "Take care of thy goods."
Applied to double-dealers.

777.

He pronounces judgment upon a needle, and (at the same time) swallows a large pole.

He is rigid in judging the affairs of others, but commits flagrant peculation himself. يبلع is used like اكل to signify that a person devours property not his own nor confided to his care. مدورة signifies in Egypt the long pole with which sailors push on the vessels in shallow water.
ARABIC PROVERBS.

778.

يمينك ما تدرى عن شباك

Thy right hand knows nothing of thy left hand.

Mohammed has taken this principle from the Scripture. One of his sayings is recorded which concludes with the following words—

رجل تصدى بصدقة فلم تعلم شمالك ما انفقته يمينه

A man distributes alms, and his left hand does not know what his right hand dispenses.

779.

يدل العبد و يضربه

He spoils the slave and then beats him.

Said of those who spoil their inferiors or their children, and then punish them for what their own folly has caused. يدل in the Egyptian dialect “to spoil (a child) by too much indulgence;” for يدل we often hear يدلع

780.

ياكل و ينفور

He eats and (at the same time) mocks (at what he eats).

Instead of thanking, he ridicules the host. ينفور is a low word of the Egyptian dialect synonymous with ينسخر.
781.
يوم في الاعانيه كثير

One day in (perfect) health is much.

The most common salutation which one receives on the road from peasants; they pronounce it "Howdy." The reply is الله يعانيك

782.
يرى الشاهد ما لا يرى الغارب

The eye-witness observes what the absent does not see.

THE END.
Isaac H. Hill.